Ever since the advertisements have been shown telling of the one-night show of "The Wonder" Joe and Nell had been preparing for this one night. The picture had been acclaimed as one of the finest made in a great many years and every prediction was made that it would be given the Academy award for the best picture of the year.

Joe had to make arrangements to go to the picture and to take his place that night for he was on the night shift at the defense plant. But Joe had been easily arranged for by somebody liked Joe and admired for his earnest and painstaking work. Nell, too, had to get her plans in order to have Mrs. Moore come stay with Joe, Jr. It was going to be a little expensive for Joe and Nell, this picture, but they would be well worth it. They had got extravagant very often.

Everything had been taken care of and the BIG NIGHT arrived on schedule. Of course, to many people the event meant more than attending the picture. It was something quite out of the ordinary and something that had meant sacrifices.

They went very early so as to get good seats. The theatre had a large seating capacity but by the time for the showing of the picture every seat in the house was filled. It was an above-the-average crowd for it was a picture that would appeal only to the better class mind. A solemn hush spread over the house as the lights dimmed and the picture began to unfold. Joe and Nell settled back in their seats, prepared for the fulfillment of their long-awaited desire. Truly "The Wonder" was all the press and public had reported.

But to Joe and Nell it was a nightmare; all their sacrifice and planning disappeared in a sickening haze of disappointment. The apple sitting ahead of them, a time under the influence of a pre-

In England

CPL. DEE W. MOORE, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hardy Moore, of Fines Creek, is now serving in England, according to information received by his parents. Cpl. Moore entered the service in 1943 when he became 18 years of age. He was inducted at Fort Bragg and from there was sent to Camp Lee, Va., where he took his basic training. From Camp Lee he was sent to Shenandoah, Pa., and from there to an embarkation port in New York. He has been overseas for fourteen months.

cocktail-party, realized as the picture proceeded that they had seen it in some other city, so they had no further interest in it. They then decided to give their entire attention to their own affairs and each other. They put their heads close together; they moved around; they interfered with the view of those behind them; they talked loudly and incessantly so that all dialog was drowned in their inane conversation and silly laughter.

It is unbelievable that any one could be so selfish and inconsiderate as to completely ruin the pleasure of other people; but here it was; two people ignoring the rights of that young couple who had so few real events in their every-day lives. If they had already seen the picture, why weren't they decent enough to go out and give those seats to others who would enjoy it rather than to sit there and deprive others of their pleasure?

Think this over when you are tempted to chat a little while a picture is being shown; those behind you may not have another opportunity in a year to come to the theatre again. So don't spoil this one evening for them.

Two Haywood Men Serving With 6th Armored Inf. Bn.

First Lt. Rufus T. Carswell, of Hazelwood, company commander, and Private First Class Harry C. Burnette, rifleman, of Canton, R. F. D. No. 2, are fighting with the 6th Armored Infantry Battalion, veteran combat unit of the First Armored Division, now pushing the Germans back on the Fifth Army front in Northern Italy.

Veteran of major campaigns in the Mediterranean theatre, the battalion landed west of Oran, North Africa, at H-hour of D-Day, of the 1942 invasion, took part in the notable Tunisian engagements of Maknassy, Station Seneb, Faid Poss, Sebictla, Kasserine, the famous "Mouse-Trap" around Mateur and Ferryville.

Coming into Italy the battalion next saw action before Cassino when the Allies were stopped short of that important goal. Given the mission of capturing Mt. Peroia, the unit fought four days against frantic German resistance in adverse weather and took its objective. This was considered the bloodiest battle the 6th ever fought. Casualties were three-quarters as great as the total casualties suffered through out the entire African campaign.

They were in the drive to Rome and they engaged in a particularly bitter fight in breaching Highway 68 east of Volterra. They played an important part in insuring General Clark's Fifth Army another great victory.

Second Edition W. C. Allen's Last History Off Press

A second edition of the "Story of Our State, North Carolina," by W. C. Allen, came off the press on the 20th of last month. The first edition was printed on October 15, 1942, and it is being used as supplementary reader in many of the counties of the state.

The Story of Our State has been brought up to date to August 1, 1944, and among other features carries a picture of Governor Gregg Cherry and Senator Clyde R. Hoey, who are listed as nominees for the offices to which they were elected this week. Other than the additional pages, with a few typographical corrections, the contents of the book remains the same.

The special features of the book are the new binding, a war-time change approved by the State Department of Education, for the reason that the color shade of the first binding could not be matched for the second.

The contents are divided into nine units. Following each unit are the exercises to test memory and study habits. There are four appendices. These are "North Carolina in Literature," "Our Notable Exiles," "Table of Governors" and "List of Counties", showing name, origin, county seat and date of erection. A feature that gives this much material is not found in any other North Carolina histories.
