CITATION:

To the women of America who continuously ignore the war department's plea for those between the ages of 20 and 50 to serve as medical technicians with the armed forces and in the hospitals, this award is hereby conferred upon them. Doctors and nurses can not alone handle the job of caring for America's wounded, and so this great responsibility falls to the women of America, who do, or do not, possess past medical training. Wounded fighting men are returning home by the thousands. Which do you prefer? This award? Or the eternal gratitude of an American fighting man . . . for helping him to walk again . . . for teaching him, in his blindness, to read Braille . . . for encouraging those who have no arms, no legs? Think it over, women of Haywood, then make your choice.
