John H. Rogers, Seaman, Serving on West Coast

John H. Rogers, seaman second class, U.S.N.R., son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Rogers, of Waynesville, is now serving on the USS Massachusetts on the West Coast, according to information received from the Fleet News Center.

The battleship on which the Haywood man is serving, reached the West Coast on September 13, to become the first vessel of her kind to return to the States since the close of the war.

The battleship known as "Big Mammie" sank three enemy warships, including the French battleship Jean Bart, seriously damaged two other fighting ships, and sailed more than 225,000 miles to participate in 35 engagements during three years of operations in two oceans.

Included in her battle record are the invasions of North Africa, the Gilberts, the Marshalls, the Philippines, Iwo Jima and Okinawa, strikes on Truj, the Marianas, the China Coast and Japan, including Touke, and the Battle of Leyte Gulf.

Farmers Warned About Feeding Spoiled Corn

Farmers were warned this week of the danger of fall storage poisoning of their livestock, due to feeding immature or spoiled corn, in a special report issued here by the American Foundation for Animal Health.

"Horses and mules frequently develop blind staggers" at this time of year—and this condition can often be traced to the feeding of corn which is moldy or not fully matured. The report states: "Sometimes moldy corn contains a poison which affects the animal's nervous system, and unless a veterinarian can administer prompt antitoxins, death often follows. Every owner who values his horses and mules will check the quality of corn carefully, before it is fed."

The report also cautioned of the danger of hog cholera among swine of which receiving new or improperly matured corn. "Feeding soft corn does not cause cholera, as some farmers believe, but it can cause digestive disturbances which weaken the hogs' resistance, and enable cholera to attack more readily," the report declares. "This is another reason why swine raisers should have their hogs immunized against cholera as early as possible, if this has not already been done."

Waynesville Man Sees Entrance 4th Fleet In Ominato Bay

Albert Raines, seaman first class, U.S.N.R., of Waynesville, witnessed the entrance of the Fourth Fleet into Japan's Ominato Bay on the tip of Northern Honshu, while serving aboard the destroyer USS McDermut.

The McDermut, a Fletcher-class destroyer christened by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, in 1943, chalked up her first battle star for taking part in the raids on the Palau Islands and Wolei, with the greatest single fleet ever assembled.

Following the initial invasion of Leyte, the McDermut took part in the great naval battle of Surigao Strait in Philippine waters, helping sink one battleship and one destroyer. Upon returning to her patrol zone off Leyte, the destroyer dispersed a formation of Japanese planes which inflicted minor damage and wounded three men in their bombing and strafing attack.

The final phase of the war found the McDermut rescuing downed pilots off Okinawa and aiding in the bombardment of the Japanese home islands. With part of the 9th fleet she took part in what was probably the last shore bombardment of the war—the shelling of Suribachi.
