THE BOOK CORNER

Reading From Left To Right

—With—

FRANCES GILBERT FRAZIER

Bunny rabbits, new frocks, flowery hats and Easter is here. And in THE BOOK STORE you will find the most fascinating little book for that adorable youngster that is yours, or a neighbor's. The book is small enough for tiny hands and is exquisitely gotten up. The name is "A TALE FOR EASTER" and is by Tasha Tudor. It is delicately illustrated and with the most alluring little pictures on each page. You will also find some Easter folders that are just the thing to send a friend in this joyous season. For a shut-in or some one recuperating, they are priceless.

With Spring approaching on the wings of Pegasus, we already begin to feel the lassitude of the proverbial spring fever and are loth to be up and about but, rather, loth in the depths of an easy chair. And read a book that seems to be in tune with the languor of the time. And just such a book is "THE RIVER ROAD," written by that well known writer, Frances Perkins Keyes. The locale of this lovely story is laid in New Orleans and surrounding country. The photographic inside pages, frontispiece and back cover, will give you that nostalgic desire to loaf under those gigantic oaks festooned with dripping moss and to row lazily on the lagoons. You can almost smell the tang of the bayous in the distance and feel the soft breezes that carry the scent of the jasmine and the whisper of the mocking bird. There is so much rich interest in this novel that it is almost impossible to give an inkling of its contents. If one would start to tell the different phases, they would find themselves in a quandary as to where they could find a stopping place. The book is so fascinating that the reader is overjoyed to find the book of pre-war size. You who have read Mrs. Keyes' "CRESCENT CARNIVAL," "ALSO THE HILLS" and her captivating stories of life in Washington, need no further introduction.

There is only one Frances Parkinson Keyes and "THE RIVER ROAD" is her latest masterpiece.

Have you happened to notice the listed best sellers lately? If you have, you've noticed "WAKE OF THE RED WITCH" by Garland Roark is well up in the parade. This is mostly a man's book but readers of either sex who want a lusty story will enjoy this one. The cover jacket gives you an idea of its strength and when you've read a chapter or two, try and lay it down. We dare you. Coincidentally, the finding of that immense treasure in Tokyo Bay has a somewhat comparable incident in the cargo of gold bullion sunk in many fathoms of water and whose whereabouts is known only to Rabbits who was captain of the ship when she sank. There are men who are in search of this treasure and they are, each, willing to go to the utmost in strength, intrigue and brutality to get that lost bullion in their possession. And of course, there is a beautiful maiden mixed up in the affair. But that's all we are going to tell you about "WAKE OF THE RED WITCH."

Hereford producer, says that the average dressing percentage for grass-fed Haywood County cattle is about 45%, and that Mr. Leatherwood has made a very fine record in producing cattle that dress out at 61.25%. M. O. Galloway, also a leading cattleman of Haywood, agrees, and says that the fact that such cattle as these can be produced on grass alone proves this county to be excellent cattle country. Haywood County is the only county in Western North Carolina to which blue grass is natural.

James F. Byrnes Receives Degree From N. C. University

F. CHAPEL HILL.—Plain Citizen James Francis Byrnes, who in working clothes is known as United States Secretary of State, took time out from world affairs and party problems here last week to receive the University of North Carolina's honorary doctor of laws. Emphasizing that he was here "to get a degree and not to talk of public affairs," the newly-created Doctor Byrnes declined comment to the press. Asked three questions by a News and Observer reporter, he shook his head to each. To the reporter's inquiries—How does a leading Democrat look at these talks of a cession by Southern Democrats, if he thought world statesmen had now found the clue to world peace; and if he would express a view on the progress of the present UN conference—he replied: "It's a nice day. I'm down here to get a degree and not to talk on national affairs. I don't want to spoil it all with press conferences."
