AP Newsfeatures Dear Judge There's a new trick the kids have for using Navy middies, started by the girls at the summer session of Bergen College, N. J. . . They snare the blouses from their brothers or friends, or buy 'em at the Navy surplus stores and dye 'em in different colors. Pastels were popular during the summer but for back-to-school the kids are dying 'em bright red, green and blue. Plain ties set them off slick. And they're perfect to wear with jeans. . . . Mother's tin canister or a cookie jar is just the thing to hold little odds and ends. And how the kids are decorating them! You can paint the can brightly and cover it completely with used stamps or wall paper or comic strips characters. Be sure to cover this over with shellac so that it won't scratch off. You can also cover the canister with strong white paper (apply with library paste) and place a medium hard-lead pencil nearby for the kids to autograph. Use a decorated jar or can to hold powder puffs, hair ribbons, any of a thousand things. . . . We had a wonderful hen-fest over at Mary's last night and she told us all about her trip to Portland, Oregon. She says it takes you practically all day to walk around the giant redwoods in the Northwest and the fish are the biggest she has ever seen. . . . Of course she was smearing the sugar because Ann had just come back from New Orleans and was delirious about the food. Her favorite was Gumbo Creole (a wonderful soup with crabs, oysters, shrimps). She is going to whip it up next time we have a jam session. . . . Sibby Kilpatrick, of Williamsport, Pa., just got a new phonograph and she's got perked. She says she really feels in the groove what with Benny Goodman, Frank Sinatra, Tommy Tucker and Bing Crosby resting on her shelf. She says all the kids will be entranced by the new "Annie Kett Your Gun" album. . . . The new Emily Wilkens' teen age clothes are slick. Necklines are either high turtle-neck or cameo, the off - the - shoulder neckline. Dirndls are the soft box-pleated kind folded like four petals of a tulip. Waistlines are high and
