GOV. CHERRY GETS REQUEST

RALEIGH — Governor Cherry says a few people have written him to ask that three state highway patrolmen who resigned in connection with the hearing of a recaptured white convict who escaped in Halifax county, be reinstated. One of the highway patrolmen later was convicted of simple assault in the hearing of the convict. Cherry says he understands a delegation will visit him asking that the men be placed back on duty but that he has received no request for a hearing. One of the letters is from the mother of former Patrolman John Wilson.

Most advances on the border belt were from one to three dollars. Some of the better quality grades reached their highest level of the season.

Harried Schools Face Trouble And Handicaps

AP Newsfeatures

Already bursting at its seams, the U. S. school system will have a bigger job this fall than ever before in its history.

Educators cite these factors increasing the school load:

1. A bulge in the American birth rate that started in 1941 will put increasing numbers of children in primary grades.

2. Veterans will continue to use government benefits to remain in the classroom.

3. Appreciation of the benefits of education has been stimulated in Americans until increasing numbers of people are making strenuous efforts to continue their education.

Handicaps Cited

The increasing classroom load finds the schools handicapped. Among difficulties troubling the educators are:

1. Salary scales which have become too low because of sharp increases in living costs.

2. Sharp reductions in the number of people taking teacher training just at the time when more teachers are needed.

3. Deterioration of school buildings and facilities during the war years.

4. Sharply increased building costs, curtailing repairs, replacements and additions just at the time when the need is greatest.

5. Shortages of building materials.

6. Shortages of books.

Growth Predicted

The pinch will increase this fall, but is expected to continue for at least six years. Dr. John W. Studebaker, U. S. commissioner of education, estimates that in those six years there will be about six million additional elementary school pupils in the country, about a million more in secondary schools and half a million more students in colleges.

The drive to meet the emergency situation has long since started throughout the country. At least 44 state legislatures have made major adjustments in school laws. Many communities have adjusted teacher pay with or without state aid in an effort to hold teachers at ready in the system and attract others.

Money Provided

Nearly all states made some provision for school financing. Delaware, Indiana and Nebraska provided state funds for school building.

A proposal to stagger the traditional three-month vacations so that the schools can operate the year around has been widely discussed.

But educators do not pretend that measures so far adopted will meet the emergency fully.

Dr. Studebaker says the emergency calls for "heroic action." But he insists that the country can meet its educational needs on the same scale that it met its war needs so that every child can be given a first rate education.

composed of the heads of all civic clubs, with representatives from the chamber of commerce and the junior chamber, and for a time, as Warren explained, the mayor and chairman of the county commission sat in. But those two officials later were eliminated, since they held public office.

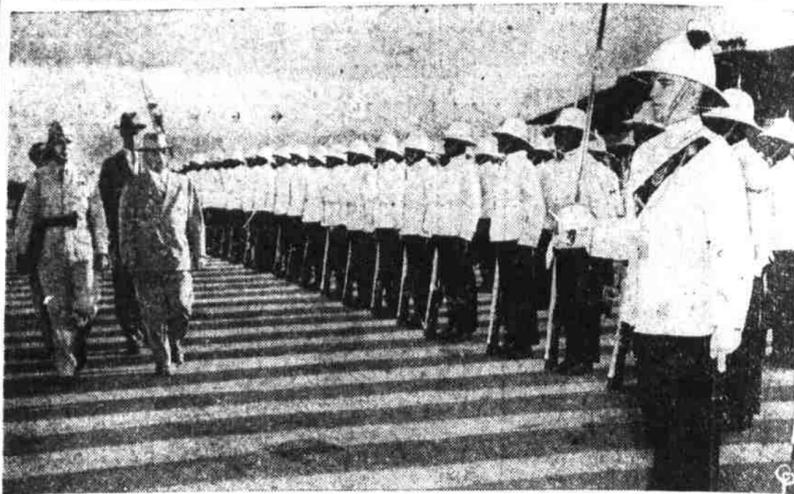

Warren was president of the Exchange Club at the time of organization of the Presidents Round Table, and was its first president. Since then he has served as president emeritus.

"To show how the system works, the Legislature at its last session created a port authority and an aviation authority, to meet the growing needs of the community," Warren said. "The bills provided that the Round Table should submit the names of ten men for each, and that the governor should appoint five members from each nominating list. In that way we got good men and not politicians. The Round Table idea has since been adopted in many other Florida cities, and not one word of criticism has been found with their work. Of course, it might not have suited the old time politicians, of whom we are happily rid."

Warren, who was guest of Paul Davis, told the Lions if clubs elsewhere were interested in the system the Round Table secretary, Francis Sack, who has served in that capacity for the twelve years of its existence, would be glad to send copies of the bylaws.

"I can't resist taking a little more of your time," Warren said. "To tell you of the growing interest among Florida folk in this Waynesville and park area. More and more business people are coming here, and a group of my friends with me at the Piedmont and at High Hampton are talking a lot, and seriously, about a place for ourselves in Waynesville. It has the climate, a good hospital, a fine golf course, and looking around the stores I can see that long term tourists can get here everything they could possibly need. It is a wonderful and a progressive community, and the cordial attitude of the people, and the splendid public relations work some of your top citizens are doing, all wrapped up, is bound to pay dividends. I take off my hat to you fellows for the fine job you are doing, and I envy some of my Florida friends who pick Waynesville as their year round home."

Although the statewide hospital expansion program is set up on a five-year basis, it is felt that the sooner action is taken the better chance there will be of securing federal and state assistance, and the sooner hospital facilities here will be adequate to serve the people.
