

How To Learn To Keep Shirt On

DANVERS, Mass. (AP)—In the middle of the night, Patrolman Raymond Cashman met an early bird. "Easy does it, chum," said the policeman as the man raced toward him, stuffing a shirt-tail into his trousers.

He's not afraid of the big man. He just remembered that Jones Radio Service had received a new shipment of records.

Burley Markets Will Open On December First

Burley sales throughout the eight-state belt this season will begin December 1 despite recommendations for a November 17 opening, the Burley Sales committee decided late yesterday.

The decision was made in Louisville after a heated discussion in which it was disclosed that a shortage of both buyers and graders was threatened under the earlier opening proposed by the Burley Auction Warehouse Association at its annual meeting last June.

No action was taken on the hours or rate of sales, with consideration of both deferred until November 17 when another meeting of the sales committee will be held in Lexington.

During the day-long Louisville session numerous warehousemen and others spoke in favor and opposition to the early opening date.

The buyers never want to open early when sales are congested, contended Herman Robinson, Lexington warehouseman. "The buyers get the break. We as warehousemen represent farmers, not the buyers. An early opening will benefit growers. The warehouse association has recommended opening on November 17 if we wait until the buyers are ready, we won't open until January 1."

Streptomycin Aids In Fight Against Tuberculosis

ROME, Ga.—(UP)—What is believed to be the first large-scale use of the earth mold drug streptomycin in the treatment of tubercular patients has proved successful and saved at least 39 persons who otherwise would have died, doctors reported here.

The physicians treated 435 patients at Battery State Hospital here with the drug during a three-month "trial" period. There were no failures, according to Hospital Superintendent Dr. Rufus F. Payne. "Seven patients under treatment with streptomycin have died, two of them from causes not connected with tuberculosis," Dr. Payne said. "But none of the deaths can be charged against streptomycin."

They were among 40 patients considered far advanced cases—that is, utterly hopeless—when treatment began.

Dr. Payne said the 33 "advanced" cases whose recovery was held hopeless before the drug was administered have "excellent" chances to get well. That they are living today, he added, "is the greatest proof of the success of streptomycin."

Value Varies He considers the wide-scale methods used here of great scientific as well as humanitarian value. For instance, Dr. Payne said Battery specialists have learned that the drug is of least value in chronic cases and that it is worthless in silicosis with tuberculosis complications.

They also have found, he said, that the toxic effects of the drug have no clinical significance, probably because streptomycin is given in comparatively smaller doses here.

Although he emphasized that results at Battery are not yet conclusive, Dr. Payne said best results so far have been obtained in bone tuberculosis, tuberculosis bronchitis, meningitis and military.

The wide-scale treatments at Battery were made possible through a fund-raising drive in which Georgians oversubscribed a $75,000 goal by $33,707.

Rustic Carmel Decides To Have Sidewalks

CARMEL, Cal.—(UP)—Carmel-by-the-Sea, which has preserved its reputation as a "quaint village" despite the inroads of thousands of tourists, artists and servicemen, is considering with misgivings—improving walking conditions for its citizens and visitors.

Members of the Carmel planning commission have agreed that unpaved, narrow streets are not a good place for persons on foot. But they shied at the ugly word "sidewalks."

Now the commission has suggested tactfully to the city council that "footpaths" might be installed, provided "every effort be made to retain the rustic atmosphere" of the community.
