Planes Search For New Storm, Gulf Area Counts Dead

(By United Press)

Hurricane-tracking planes have been sent out from Miami to track down the new storm now brewing in the southeastern Gulf of Mexico.

In the devastated path of last week's hurricane, weary rescue workers along the Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana Gulf coastal areas are still trying to get an accurate count of the dead. Between 50 and 75 are dead, and hundreds are still missing.

Along the Mississippi coast, state troopers are hunting down poisonous moccasin snakes on the beaches.

High winds, offshoots of the destructive hurricane, whipped other parts of the country.

At Erie, Pennsylvania, power lines were blown down, and the same report comes from Youngstown, Ohio.

The last report on the new storm placed it about 90 miles southwest of Key West, Florida. It had winds running up to 50 miles an hour early this morning. It was moving on a northwesterly track. But storm warnings remained up along the Florida east coast from Palm Beach to the Keys.

Mississippi Congressman John Rankin says he'll talk to President Truman about relief measures for the hurricane area today. Rankin says that if there is not enough money available for the work he will insist on an immediate special session of Congress to provide the funds.

High Milk Prices Should Not Deter Culling Practice

When prices of milk get high because of scarcity, brought about either by increased demand or lower production, dairymen tend to neglect the proper culling of their herds, according to A. C. Kimrey, Extension Dairy specialist at State College.

Culling should be carefully done in times of high prices as well as in low price periods, the specialist said. When milk is high in price, meat is usually high also; therefore, the salvage price of a cull cow usually bears about the same ratio to milk prices whether high or low.

This winter will be a period of high labor and high feed cost, and the marginal cow that might have returned a small profit during the summer when grazing was plentiful will most likely become a boarder when barn feeding is resumed.

With concentrates approaching one hundred dollars per ton and good hay at a price in proportion, it is good dairy business to carefully go over the production, health breeding record, and age of each cow in the herd and then do some thoughtful culling as the facts may indicate, Mr. Kimsey said.

If culling is not regularly done, the percentage of unprofitable and undesirable cows increases, resulting in heavy culling at one time, which for many reasons is undesirable. In herds where a number of questionable cows are being kept, it often means more calves than the place is set up to properly handle. This often results in poorly cared for and improperly fed calves, thus damaging the future herd he declared.

If reasonable and regular culling is done and feed of the culled cows distributed among the better cows left in the herd, more profit will be realized and often as much or more milk will be produced with less cows, Mr. Kimrey said.

Two ABC Stores In Charlotte Will Be Open At Night

CHARLOTTE (UP)—Two of the nine liquor stores in newly wet Mecklenburg county will remain open until 9 p. m. six days a week but the other seven will close at 6 p. m., Chairman Frank Sims, Jr., of the county alcoholic beverage control board announced today.

Opening date for the stores has not been set but Sims said they would begin business at 10 a. m. daily. Sims said the 9 p. m. closing was approved by state ABC officials to enable legal outlets in the heavily-populated Charlotte area to cut into the business hours of bootleggers.

Mecklenburg became the only oasis in the dry sweep of Western North Carolina when voters approved legal liquor stores in a heated election last spring.
