

Dutch Bellfounder Sets Up Chime Industry In S. C.

By ALDERMAN DUNCAN
AP Newsfeatures

GREENWOOD, S. C.—This western Carolina industrial city may soon become the new home of an old Dutch bell foundry famous for its carillons.

Harry T. Van Bergen, of the 152-year-old Van Bergen Bell, Chimes and Carillon Company of Helligerlee in the Netherlands expects to start producing the firm's product here as soon as he can obtain sufficient tin. He hopes to sell his tuneful chimes to American churches, universities and memorial organizations.

A number of years ago James C. Sell, Greenwood industrialist, became interested in carillons while on a European trip. At Cologne, Germany, he was impressed with the music from the carillon in an old church and conceived the idea of having one for his cotton mill village.

Later, at the New York World's Fair he met Van Bergen, who was exhibiting his carillon. They talked business tentatively and when the war came along Van Bergen, not wanting to return home, accepted Sell's offer to buy the 32-bell carillon for installation in a memorial tower at the Calhoun Memorial Baptist Church in South Greenwood.

Van Bergen came to supervise the work, liked the place, brought his wife and young son from Helligerlee just in time to escape the German invasion. He knew his carillon business would have to wait out the war, but Sell set up a foundry to make mill castings and put Van Bergen in charge.

Now the 48-year-old Van Bergen, son of seven generations of bellfounders, is impatient to get on again with his carillon-making. He has been held up, however, by difficulties in obtaining block tin used in bell metal, 20 percent of which is tin and 80 percent copper.

Pioneer Farming Days Not Over, Two Men Prove

WESTHOPE, N. D.—(UP)—Back in the dust-dreary days of the early 30's, a tired, hungry man was stranded in the little town of Rolla, N. D., because he didn't have money to buy a tire for an ancient truck.

It was Howard Henry, who this year will harvest a $57,000 wheat and flax crop.

Howard Henry, like a great many other North Dakota farmers in the '30's, borrowed money year after year—staved off creditors, waited for crops that never came, watched dust, cloudless skies, burning sun—all combined to turn Bottineau County into a desolate waste of Russian thistles.

He and a friend succeeded in getting one more grub-stake. With Bill Shaffer, his partner, he got the needed tire for the old truck and commenced hauling lignite coal. In exchange they got government seed for a dime a bushel.

"We never had our shoes off for three months," he recalled as he watched his trucks haul wheat away from four combines. "We had to keep rolling in those days."

Today, Howard Henry farms 23 sections of land and doesn't owe a cent on a single acre. Shaffer now is a "retired" farmer.

But Henry, sun-tanned and only 41 years old, is making things hum in the little prairie town. He owns the only hotel and a restaurant and he is building a new theater, a 70-room all-modern apartment house and a jewelry store. Next summer he plans to sponsor a children's playground.

All of my money came out of Bottineau County soil," he explained, "and it's all going to stay in it here."

Henry, vice-president of the state's Farmers' chapter and a member of the state board of education.

"I don't fear another calamity like the black blizzard area," he said. "We've learned a lot about farming since then."

Thief Fools Himself

KENDALLVILLE, Ind. (UP)—Tommy Clyde Jones pleaded guilty to taking a money bag from his apartment mate but he said he had burned almost $1,000 in it by mistake. Jones said he was trying to destroy the evidence and thought the bag contained nothing but receipts.

EVERYTHING GETS READ

For the past few weeks Mrs. Atkins and I with some good volunteer help namely: Mrs. J. D. Cho, Mrs. Cornelia Nixon, and Miss Martha Stringfield have been trying to get some books ready for the shelves.

Being able to have just the right book for you is not easy, but when we have just bought a book on the subject you need, then we feel very proud of our selections. You'd be surprised at the number of times this happens. Now take the book "Wedding Etiquette Complete" by Marguerite Benchley. It is still not ready for the shelves for several different people have been using it in planning their weddings.

"Sketching is easy," the new book by Arthur Zaidenberg, has already been seen by three people interested in Art. Then, too, there is "Art for Young America," "Shoe Repairing," "Candy Making," and "Applied Leathercraft" have been put aside to meet requests and incidentally the one on leather will go to a second person as soon as it is received.

"My, but I can't get a chance at 'Inside U.S.A.'" by John Gunther. There's a chapter on T.V.A. I want to read, but it is still going to those who have requested it.

The books on "Coloring, Finishing and Painting Wood," "Modern Metalcraft," "Constructive Woodwork," "Things to make and how to make them" and "General Shop Handbook" are being held for a certain teacher who is interested in background material for his classes.

The "Picture Book of Palestine" by Ethel Smutter has already found its way into the hands of several Sunday School teachers. "Table Graces" was just what a certain program chairman needed for her program. (She waited while I finished typing cards, pasting in the pocket and stamping the book).

Between our real estate agents and others the book "Cabins, Cottages and Summer Homes" by Bernard S. Mason and Frederic H. Kock has been leading a merry chase. It seems that each person mentions it to some one else and then they pop up at our desk wanting it.

You'd be surprised at the wide variety of books in our collection. Let us know your interest. It could be that the very book you want is in that box of books which has just arrived. Try and see!

WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO?

So many of our people have requested information on the many occupations that we are attempting to add some new material. Each month we will receive several Occupational Briefs on America's major job fields published by the Science Research Associates. At present we have the following briefs: Metallurgical Engineers, Safety Engineers, Court Reporters, Upholsterers, Industrial Glass Industry Workers, F.B.I. Agents, Aeronautical Engineers, Beekeepers, Stewardesses, Farm Equipment Industry Workers, and Foreign Correspondents.

Other pamphlets in the group are Origin of Impractical or Unrealistic Vocational Goals, the High School Dean's Professional Day, Factors of Intelligence, The Guidance Index which lists other material.

Don't miss "Study your way through School". It's a grand little pamphlet on studying with good cartoons of Teen-agers. There is another on "Opportunities in Farming" by Paul W. Chapman. In addition we have the following booklets from the Vocational Guidance Series: Opportunities in Acting, Fashion, Horticulture, Architecture, Public Relations, Travel, Finance, Journalism, Free Lance Writing, Radio, and Interior Decoration.

Police Go After Overdue Library Books In Seven American Cities

By ALFRED LEECH
United Press Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO — (UP) — Open the door, it's the police. They want that overdue copy of Shakespeare you forgot to return to the public library.

In seven cities, at least, police sometimes are detailed to collect books overdue at the public library, according to the American Municipal Association.

A national survey made by the public library of Montclair, N. J., shows that unreturned police retrieve long-overdue books when other methods fail in Albuquerque, N. M.; Bridgeport, Conn.; Durham, N. C.; Providence, R. I.; Somerville, Mass., and Elizabeth and South Orange, N. J.

In Seattle, delinquent borrowers can be arrested and their homes searched under warrants if they fail to heed repeated warnings. The Seattle library's third notice on overdue books is a legal letter, indicating that if the book is not returned the borrower faces arrest.

Newark, N. J., also uses stern measures, relying on search warrants to recover unreturned volumes. In Detroit, libraries may ask police to issue a court summons if a borrower makes off with a book.

Midwives still aid in childbirth in rural areas, but they almost have disappeared in cities, a study by the American Public Welfare Association shows.

In New York City, the association reported, there are only 93 licensed midwives. But in Arkansas, 1,500 midwives in rural areas are being taught modern methods of child delivery.

Thirty years ago there were 3,131 midwives in New York, and they delivered more than 40 per cent of all the babies born in the city. Now, they deliver only one-fifth of one per cent.

The big cities hire more municipal employes per capita than small towns do, according to the Census Service Assembly. There are almost twice as many municipal workers per unit of population in cities of more than 100,000 as there are in smaller communities, the assembly said.

Figures from the U. S. Census Bureau showed that a fourth of all the municipal employes in the nation work for the five cities with more than 1,000,000 population—New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Philadelphia and Detroit.

In those five cities there is an average of one municipal employe for every 66 residents, while in the 985 cities between 10,000 and 100,000
