Holiday Accidents Fatal to More Than 700 U. S. People

More than 700 people died in accidents throughout the nation on the long July 4 week-end. Most of these were victims of traffic crashes, with drownings running second as the cause of death.

July 31 To Be Homecoming Day At Cove Creek

By VERA REEVES Mountaineer Correspondent July 31 will be Homecoming Day for both present and former citizens of Cove Creek.

Last year, some 700 people attended the all-day family-style celebration, making new acquaintances and refreshing old ones.

At the 11 a. m. services at the Cove Creek Baptist church, the Rev. Dock Russell, the pastor, will preach the sermon for the occasion.

After the worship hour ends, there will be dinner on the grounds, with singing by quartets, trios, duets, and soloists, and brief talks featuring the afternoon program.

Vinson Morrow, chairman of the Cove Creek Community Development Program, will preside at the gathering, to which everyone is invited.

Coldest Glass of Water Produced by Science

SCHENECTADAY, N. Y. (UP)—How cold can a glass of water get, General Electric scientists at the company laboratory here wanted to know.

The scientists have super-cooled water to 71 degrees below its so-called freezing point without changing its form.

They say that for water to freeze, not only must the temperature and pressure be right, but also particles must be present about which the material can freeze. These particles are called "nuclei" and by getting rid of them, scientists have super-cooled water 77 degrees Fahrenheit below its freezing point, mercury 72 degrees Fahrenheit below its freezing point, tin 190 degrees, and gallium 125 degrees.

Cigar-Loving Virginian Runs Into Red Tape

KILMARNOCK, Va. (UP)—The cigar-loving mayor of Kilmarnock in Virginia may have to smoke leather when he visits the mayor of Kilmarnock in Scotland.

The Scottish mayor, Daniel Cairns, visited the Virginia mayor, E. Walter Harvey, last August. Harvey has learned that returning the visit this summer will entail a few sacrifices. He said he wouldn't mind if he could take a suitcase full of cigars.

He was considerably shaken when he heard the bad news. He can take only 25 cigars with him to Great Britain. The blow was softened, however, when he figured out that Mrs. Harvey, who does not smoke cigars, also can take 25.

Yale will play seven of its nine football games next fall at home; Columbia will be met in New York and Princeton at Princeton.

LATROBE, Pa. (UP)—This may sound like a fairy tale, but Mrs. Andrew Zavada says quadruplets mean four of every thing but trouble.

Mrs. Zavada changes 500 diapers a week on her quartet of 15-month-old youngsters and she works from 6 a.m. to midnight, but she's less ruffled about her job than the average mother of one.

"It's not hard," she smiled. "If you have a system. And it helps when the babies are as good as mine."

Doctors said the birth of the Zavada quadruplets was one in 600,000 when they were born last year in February, but the mother says they're at least four in a million. John Michael and his three sisters sleep much of the time. They wait patiently for their turns at being fed, bathed and changed.

Appetites Good They eat almost everything that is poked into their mouths, and they treat visitors to smiles and friendly postures.

All that co-operation makes it easier for their efficient mother, but it's still an 18-hour-a-day job to take care of four babies, a six-year-old, a steelworker husband and an eight-room house. A practical nurse comes to help with the famous quartet on six days and Mrs. Zavada's mother comes two days a week to help with the chores, and it's still a long day for the mother.

The quads get up at 8 a.m., after their mother has been getting the father and their six-year-old brother off for the day. First on the schedule is milk all around, then baths and breakfast at about 10 o'clock. They go to bed around noon when a second bottle makes its appearance, and they play until about two. A meal of strained vegetables, meat and fruit is next on the schedule. They get two more bottles between that time and 8 o'clock when they hit the hay for the night.

Between times, Mrs. Zavada keeps her house shining, cooks and does a washing every day. A diaper service handles that end of the wash, but there's still plenty to do. The quads wear at least one outfit and a different nightgown every day. Besides that, the cribs must be changed, too.

Mrs. Zavada is the only one who can tell her famed offspring apart without fail. But she still puts tiny identification bracelets around their ankles.

Firemen Don't Need A Fire

There's the fire truck, the fire chief (Clem Fitzgerald), fire hose, and firemen all working. But no fire. Waynesville smoke-eaters do several other things besides fight fire.

State Capitol Tunnel Ends Traffic Woes

SALEM, Ore. (UP)—The state has started a tunnel under Court Street from the capitol to its new office building, ending a traffic jam that has plagued the city for years.

Coy Donnell McKay said the tunnel stand to pay its way and more in time saved in needed travel from the capitol to the $2,000,000 office building.

Court Street takes the Pacific highway, which knifes unbroken from British Columbia to Mexico, through the center of Salem, and traffic past the state house is something to see. Thanks to the tunnel Court Street traffic will move unmolested by state employe pedestrians. And state employe pedestrians will move from structure to structure unmolested by Court Street traffic.

Meat production under Federal inspection for the week ended May 21 totaled 259 million pounds, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture.
