Prof Says Tornado's Paths Are Predictable

ST. LOUIS (UP)—A geophysicist believes the path of a tornado can be predicted. Edward M. Brooks, associate professor of geophysics at St. Louis University, claims that such violent windstorms travel in a cyclonic "cage" from five to 12 miles wide. This cage, Brooks says, is predictable in its movement. But telling in advance just where the funnel-shaped clouds may dip to earth is another matter. Usually, he says, it is impossible because the clouds containing the embryo tornadoes wander here and there within the "cage." So confident is Brooks of his theory that he has set up a tornado warning system south and west of St. Louis through the co-operation of about a dozen radio "hams" who serve as observers. Bureau Unconvinced Brooks says his studies of frequent tornadoes around St. Louis in the past two years show that each of them was preceded by similar disturbance from 12 to 48 hours in southwest Missouri, Oklahoma or Texas. The U. S. Weather Bureau here says it is "interested" in Brooks' theory but it is going to wait to be shown. Forecaster Arthur Rausch says the weather service is able to predict the movement of "conditions favorable to the development of tornadoes." But it won't go any further than that. No one really knows what causes tornadoes, Rausch said, except that they develop within cyclonic disturbances which accompany cold fronts on their movements south-southeast.

Take Care In Washing Blankets, And Bedspreads

By RUTH CURRENT State Home Demonstration Agent Dry sunny summer weather is the time many housewives choose for washing blankets and bedspreads. When doing this job, textile specialists suggest care in brushing up the nap or fluffy surface of cotton chenille spreads and wool blankets. The nap on chenille spreads may be fluffed by shaking them occasionally as they dry on the line and rubbing briskly with the hand or a soft brush. Give them a final rub after they are dry. Never use a stiff brush because it is likely to pull out some of the chenille. To raise the nap on wool blankets, however, a clean, stiff whisk broom is recommended, but the brushing must be done after the blanket is thoroughly dry. Wool is weak when wet and must be handled carefully. When dry, brushing will not damage the blanket, and fluffing the surface will add much to its warmth. Chintz curtains can so easily delight the eye for color that no one can resist them. They are washable but don't have to be laundered often as their shiny surface sheds dirt well. But here we emphasize, read your labels, for there is chintz and chintz. The best buy is permanent glaze chintz which has a durable finish unhurt by washing. Never soak this chintz. Wash in lukewarm water and mild soap or detergent. Dry in the shade. Iron on the glazed side while still slightly damp with a moderate iron. There is also chintz that is not permanently glazed. It has a glazed finish when purchased but when washed this glaze disappears. But in time, it does have to be washed despite the loss of glaze, so again do not soak, use lukewarm water for wash and rinse, and mild soap or detergent.

PENALIZED NEW YORK (A. P.)—Looking over last season's statistics, officials of the American Hockey League have decided that penalties incurred by a team affect its standing only slightly. The league champion Providence Reds spent 509 minutes in the penalty box, and the trailing Washington Lions only 14 minutes less—495. Pittsburgh and Cleveland, third and fourth in the west, had the most and least penalty time, respectively.

Ted Rogers Will Race In Soap Box Derby on Saturday

Ted Rogers is among those entering the Soap Box Derby race in Asheville, Saturday. Ted is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Rogers, and has spent much of his vacation time building his car, which will weigh about 150 pounds. Materials have cost him about $17, he said. The winner of the race will receive a free trip to the national derby in Akron, Ohio, later this month, in addition to $50 in cash from the Asheville race. Each entrant must build his own car. The race is to start at one o'clock.

Beef Cattle Discussed At Cove Creek Meet

BY VERA REEVES Mountaineer Correspondent A discussion of beef cattle featured the Cove Creek Community Development meeting Friday night. Community Chairman Vinson Morrow talked on this enterprise, which is one of those being pushed in the county's Community Development Program. Plans also were drawn at the meeting for a picnic which will be held soon. Mrs. D. C. Davis, of the program committee, who was in charge of the meeting, read "David's Prayer" and offered the opening devotional.

For a delicious punch for a warm day, mix tea, pineapple juice, orange juice and a little lemon juice. Sweeten to taste and chill. Just before serving, add ginger-ale.

The recitation of poems by the children provided another highlight of the meeting. The next session will be held at 7:30 p. m. July 15.
