

Congress Is Governed By Many Queer Regulations

By CLARKE BEACH

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The capitol building isn't just another government office building. It's an institution. The way it is run is fearfully and wonderfully complicated.

Everybody on Capitol Hill is a stickler for that part of the Constitution which makes the House and Senate completely independent of each other.

Janitor service on the Senate side of the capitol comes under the sergeant-at-arms of the Senate. On the House side it is under the doorkeeper of the House.

If you are a representative and are having trouble with the telephone service it depends on whether you are a Democrat or Republican whom you call.

If you don't like the Senate's famous bean soup, you take it up with the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration.

If you have a suggestion to improve the barber and beauty shops on the Senate side, you just call up the sergeant-at-arms.

Incidentally, if you are a senator you can save yourself a dime by getting your hair cut on the House side.

When you want to get fixed up with office space on the Senate side, you just call the Rules and Administration committee.

Salamanders Aid War On Cancer

MILWAUKEE (UP)—The lowly salamander is doing his bit in the war on cancer.

Researchers at Marquette University are using the tiny, lizard-like animals in a series of experiments to determine whether normal tissues can be grown from cancerous ones.

Salamanders have been chosen for the tests because of their phenomenal ability to grow new parts when old ones are lost.

The Rev. John O'Brien, zoology professor at Marquette, explains the experiments this way:

"We've X-rayed the legs of salamanders, and the X-rayed areas prevent the growth of new parts. We plan to take cancers from frogs and transplant them to the legs of salamanders.

"The zoology professor says the researchers want to find out if the salamanders' renewal power then will grow new limbs from the cancer tissues.

If they do, he says, it will be demonstrated that cancer cells can be transformed into normal tissue.

Australia May Unify Its Baby Sitters

CANBERRA, Australia (UP)—The federal executive of the Australian Labor Party wants baby sitting classified as an occupation.

Members feel that the occupation of baby sitters has become of national importance. They also want baby sitters to be provided through the governments employment service.

A. S. McAlpin, president of the A.L.P. executive, said if an award is made for baby sitters, they would come under the Miscellaneous Workers' Union.

When pay day comes, if you are a representative you get your check from the sergeant-at-arms, but your clerks and secretaries get theirs from the House disbursing clerk.

Members of the House have to keep one other little tradition in mind — the mace. If they make a fuss on the floor the sergeant-at-arms carries the mace over to the scene, and that's supposed to quiet them down.

Horse Opera Put Tar Heel Actress Into Operettas

By BERNARD GAYZER (AP New Features)

CHICAGO—Two kinds of opera—horse and regular—figured in the career of Anne Jeffreys, svelte singing star of the national company of "Kiss Me Kate."

She set off at a full gallop for opera. Horse operas kept her moving, but at an uneven trot. Anne started out some years ago to whip into shape as one of the more attractive operatic stars.

ANNE JEFFREYS draws Anne.

ago to whip into shape as one of the more attractive operatic stars. She retained the shape, but got sidetracked.

"It was money," she explained in an interview. "Didn't have any money and needed some to study music so I could get into opera."

Following the path of thousands of others, she settled with her mother in luscious Hollywood where she got a long term contract.

In six years she had parts in 34 movies, 12 of which were westerns. It was publicized to some extent that the beautiful belle from Goldsboro, N. C., was closer to a horse than his saddle.

Naturally, press agents seized on this to note that she was going from "horse opera to opera" when she appeared in "Tosca" at the Brooklyn Academy of Music in 1946.

"It would be safer to say I went from the 'bad type girl' to opera," she said. "I was a bad girl in most of the other movies; you know, the kind who would cheat in a game

One Polio Attack May Not Mean Life Immunity

One attack of polio may not mean immunity for life. It was revealed today by Felix Stovall, campaign director for the Waynesville area.

The Chairman of the March of Dimes organization stated that a recent research report from national headquarters indicates there are at least three kinds of polio virus capable of producing the human disease and that infection with one does not result in resistance to either of the other two.

Prior to the knowledge that three kinds of polio virus exist, Mr. Stovall said, physicians had been puzzled by the numerous instances of polio occurring more than once in certain individuals. He recited the case of a young girl in Texas during last summer's epidemic, who came down with an attack of polio just one week before she was to enter the hospital for surgery on a leg which had been paralyzed by polio two years previously.

"More of these cases," he declared, "are being reported by physicians. Recognition of the three different polio viruses now offers a sound scientific explanation for these tragic multiple attacks."

Mr. Stovall revealed that scientists believe there may be other polio viruses in addition to the three recently discovered. He added that last year $1,370,000 in March of Dimes funds were given to four leading universities to determine the actual number of polio viruses existing.

"If a possible preventive for polio such as a vaccine is to be of jacks."

"This experience with horse operas had quite an effect on Anne, who once was the kind of girl who looked on horses as practically house pets. Now she likes them if they're in front of milk wagons, under somebody else or stables in parks. As she puts it, 'I got tired of getting third billing to a horse.'"

"She made the money, studied music and had a successful fling in opera."

At present, her love—or at any rate, her livelihood—rests in the musical stage. Critics who viewed her at the Shubert theater unanimously thought it was a well-placed love.

Anne says she is 26. As she explains: "When I started out I was the same age as what's-her-name (she named a Hollywood star but asked that it not be used). Then, as we got older, she turned out to be three years younger than me. That mixes me up some, but I guess I'm an even 26."

Anne's also a mighty fancy doodler, specializing in sketches of scantily clad girls. They all look like her which is a very nice way to look.

Mail To Go Through, Carrier Decides

FAIRFIELD, Neb. (UP)—Ray Killion is a rural mail carrier who looks ahead. Last winter, he wasn't able to deliver mail during the worst part of the blizzard that hit Nebraska.

This year, Killion is ready for any kind of weather. He has burned weeds along the road on his 68-mile route. He said the weeds caused snow to pile up and drift over the road last winter.

When snow comes this winter, he said, there won't be any drifts bothering him.

"made," he continued, "scientists must first know how many polio viruses are capable of causing the human disease."

The four universities engaged in this essential polio research, he added, are the University of Southern California, University of Utah, University of Kansas, and University of Pittsburgh. Mr. Stovall concluded with the statement that a deadline had been set for the completion of this study by the end of 1951.

Forester Urges Orders Be Filed For Seedlings

Landowners who still plan to plant tree seedlings for reforestation purposes are urged by District Forester Charles Pettit to place their orders as soon as possible with the Department of Conservation and Development.

Mr. Pettit says there are plenty of loblolly, slash, shortleaf and longleaf pine left at the Clayton Forest Nursery, but new orders are arriving daily for them.

The Forestry Division expects to sell nearly 10 million seedlings this year to more than 2,000 landowners throughout the State.

District Forester Pettit says order blanks for trees may be had by writing to him at the State Forester's Office, Department of Conservation and Development, Raleigh, N. C.

County Forest Warden R. E. Caldwell will also take orders and forward the applications to the proper authority.

THE GREAT AMERICAN HABIT

Flipping switches is The Great American Habit. Even children have it. And it's a habit that has given America the world's highest standard of living.

In the home, electricity is just about the smallest item in the budget, but what else makes life so easy, so healthy, so comfortable?

In industry, electricity lends the employee the strength of giants. Electric motors multiply his muscular strength by dozens or even by thousands — making it possible for him to produce more, better, faster — to earn more.

Electricity is certainly a vital part of our American life yet, oddly, this country spends only 2% of its vast income for electric service. Such a bargain in efficiency didn't happen by accident, of course. Business-managed electric light and power companies pioneered the electric industry — progressed and expanded because of investors with faith and vision, employees with skill and experience.

There are still broad fields of electric living yet to be tapped. Business men can do the job better than bureaucrats. That's always been the secret of America's progress.
