Games were played during the afternoon and the guests were: Betty Ruth Atkins, Betty Owen, Mary Frances Lane, Jean McDaniels, Ernie Edwards, Jimmy Evans, Gerald Kelly, Harry Sullivan, Doug Robinson, Mike Lane, David Moody, Jimmy Cassabella, and Jackie Atkins.

Mrs. Dewey Hyatt left Sunday for Charlotte to buy spring merchandise for The Fashion Shop.

Tunic Dress

Honey brown afternoon frock.

By VERA WINSTON

HERE AND there, we notice the peplum, that very good device for lending interest to an otherwise simple or slim silhouette. It is used to relieve the straight line of this charming afternoon dress which is fashioned of honey brown crepe. Cut out embroidery joins the tunic type peplum of the skirt in front, with the peplum hanging clear in back. Embroidery is used on the cowl-draped scarf at the yoke line of the bodice which has short sleeves cut in one.

Mrs. Raymond C. Lane of Lake Junaluska was the speaker for the January meeting of the Waynesville Business and Professional Women's Club held Tuesday night at the Lodge.

She was introduced by Mrs. Edith P. Alley, chairman of the club's committee on International Relations, which was in charge of the program.

Mrs. Lane, who has resided in a number of foreign countries, used as her subject, "General Conditions in the World Today." She reviewed current events with respect to: how peoples work together - the United Nations and the Specialized Agencies; expanding world trade; atomic energy control; responsibility of the United States in the world today; and progress and problems since World War II in foreign countries.

She stressed the importance of the study of current events and the necessity for every American citizen to be informed, and the importance of lending moral support to the strengthening of the work of the United Nations.

Mrs. M. G. Stamey, president of the club, presided during the business session.

Stylist Gives Hair Hints For Women

NEW YORK (UP)—Homespun hints for taking care of your own hair sound strange coming from the hair salon of a professional hair stylist, D'Amico.

He's an Italian-born hair dresser who specializes in arranging and tinting glamorous feminine coiffures so the effect is far from homespun. But he's full of sophisticated suggestions such as rolling hair on curlers made from brown paper bags and making your own hair lacquer from lemon peels.

"I am a very big enthusiast of the health of the hair," he explained. "That is why I am anxious for women to learn more about proper care of their hair at home."

His favorite shampoo for all types of hair is made from a cake of pure white castile soap.

"Buy an average size cake, grate it, then dilute it in about five cups of water," D'Amico explained. "Boil the mixture until the soap is dissolved, then cool it and store it in a covered jar until you need it."

For Dry Hair

One exception to all-purpose shampoo is his suggestion for cleaning exceptionally dry hair.

"Ordinarily the treatment for dry hair is not a question of shampoo, but a question of what is used before the shampoo," he said. "But since our usual treatment of oil and lanolin may be difficult to apply before a home shampoo, I suggest trying a shampoo with egg whites."

D'Amico uses the whites of two or three eggs, slightly beaten, for the shampoo. The hair is wet first with plain water, then the egg whites are massaged into the scalp and through the hair. Thorough rinsing with warm water completes the egg white shampoo.

When he is asked for his recipe for lemon peel lacquer, D'Amico invariably answers, "Please call it a hair fixative, not a lacquer. No woman should use lacquer on her hair. It is better for floors."

Lemon Peel Does It

He advises using the complete peel from three lemons. Boil it in two cups of water until the liquid is slightly sticky. Then strain the liquid, add a pinch of sugar, and it's ready to use in an ordinary hair atomizer. D'Amico prefers spraying to applying with cotton to avoid getting too much of the "fixative" on the hair.

Ordinary brown paper bags are cut into strips about 10 inches long and three inches wide by D'Amico for home curlers. He folds them three or four times, rolls large sections of hair around them and then ties them securely.

"Hair can be wrapped this way when it is almost dry," he explained. "The paper doesn't absorb moisture as rags would, and it cannot split or stretch the hair."

Even if a woman goes to a beauty shop regularly, D'Amico thinks she'd do well to learn a few tricks of home hair care.

"Then she won't look like a queen for a day when she leaves the beauty shop and a washwoman the rest of the week."
