

New Yorkers Impressed With Haywood Beauty

When Gilbert and Deloris Hembree went to New York on their honeymoon to visit Mrs. Hembree's brother and his wife, they told them about the Hembree farm, the fish pond and the mountains. To this they added an invitation to the New York couple to come down and see all this for themselves.

On Tuesday morning the 11th of April, Mrs. William Gainer of New York arrived at the Hembree farm, looked around and immediately commented that it certainly was every bit as peaceful, pleasant, and beautiful as they had described.

"All this space!" Mrs. Gainer entranced, and continued: "In New York my husband and I recently moved into an apartment where the biggest attraction is the patio in the back. Don't laugh but we have a back yard all of sixteen feet wide by twenty feet long and we're tickled silly to have that much."

But Mrs. Gainer is also careful to have it known that she thinks New York has its good points, too. With a husband doing public relations work and she engaged in the employment field for advertising and publishing personnel, she feels that they would have very limited opportunities in their types of work outside of New York.

Asked to give some personal information about herself, Mrs. Gainer explained that she originally came from another mountainous region — Vermont. After leaving college there she traveled and lived in thirteen states and the District of Columbia where she spent four years as copywriter and later as assistant promotion manager for The Washington Post. From there she went overseas as a civilian employer for the War Department in the Special Service Section. It was there that she met Mrs. Hembree's brother and married him in Paris, France. Since their return to the States the Gainers have made their home in New York but Mrs. Gainer fears that if her husband ever sets eyes on the fish pond on the Hembree farm it will be very difficult to drag him back North!

Tomatoes stuffed with crabmeat salad and a little chopped anchovy make a wonderful luncheon dish. For fancy service be sure to peel the tomatoes; you can do this by dipping them into water and then turning them over a flame until their skin bursts. Use a long-handled two-tined fork with which to hold them over the heat.
