THE YOUNGER SET

By MILDRED MEDFORD
High School Senior

... the Juniors of Waynesville had a Junior Day, which was unusual for WTHS. It came to school in their school bus, which looked like a truck and that they all carried...

... from the school to Cracker field in Hazelwood... they had to rest before they went up the hill. Back down the hill again... and this time the good time started. All the seniors were playing Truth or Dare (a game) and the seniors refused to take the Consequences... so two of the largest in the class, Bob Setzer and...

... the most successful of the class has had to do with it was sponsored by the Hazelwood Paper Staff. They had a picnic and they made plans for the next day after an evening of fun and a wonderful outing and feeling...

... drinks, hay, and just a lot of everything added in to make up the menu... delicious. Hazelwood Club has its own Mrs. Alma Jackson, who is a very high school girl with her members. She is a lot of fun, even though she is an English teacher.

... St. John's School just let the opportunity pass to see Bette Hannah with a bouquet before she graduated from her school. It is a senior this year and a student at St. John's where the school first opened...

Canton High School Girl Reports Washington Trip Thrilling, Strenuous Fun For Students

By CAROLYN McELRATH
(Canton High School Senior)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The very name has a certain magic to it. We seniors certainly found out what it was like when we visited the city from April 17 through April 22. For the benefit of those poor unfortunate souls who had to work at school all that week, this article is respectfully dedicated.

We left Canton on Monday morning bright and early (after the last arrivals had just made it). We were all naturally excited and eager to get started so the late arrivals were nearly murdered. Finally the noise and confusion died down and we were off!

After riding and eating and riding and eating and more riding, we arrived in Washington late Monday night. We reached our hotel and tried to get a little sleep so we would be fresh for the next morning's tour.

After a few hours of sleep, if you can call it that, we crawled out to breakfast. All of us made sure we had on comfortable shoes, because we had been warned beforehand that we should have on the most comfortable ones we could find. We at last started our tour of Washington, D. C.

The first thing on the list was the Capitol building. We saw this, the Supreme Court Building, and the Shakespearean Library in the morning. We marveled at the beauty and splendor of these buildings.

After a quick lunch, we were off again to visit the Monastery, the Zoo, and the Cathedral. We learned quite a few new things about these places and we enjoyed visiting them. As some of our members barely escaped capture by the zoo officials, we were pretty glad to get out of that place.

We were tired and our feet were beginning to ache from all the walking. We still had two more points of interest to see this day, so we walked some more until we came to the Lincoln Memorial and the Library of Congress. If you have ever been to the Lincoln Memorial, you will understand the feeling we had as we gazed upon the statue of Abraham Lincoln.

Once more we slept and once more that awful hour of 7 a. m. came around and I felt myself being pulled out of bed by one or more of my room-mates. (I still haven't found out who committed that crime). I can still hear sounds of "Hurry up or we'll miss breakfast."

Amid many groans and complaints about aching feet, we started off again and Wednesday we had many interesting places to visit. In the morning we saw Washington Monument. (Oh, those 900 steps and what fools we were to try to climb them). Bureau of Printing and Engraving, Jefferson Memorial, Pan-American Building, and the White House. Since the White House is undergoing some repair work and construction, we were unable to see what it looks like inside.

On Wednesday afternoon, we went through the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Smithsonian Institute, and the Mellon Art Gallery. The last two buildings are ones in which I could have spent hours, if not days just gazing around. There were so many in-

Interesting Exhibits and Paintings

Wednesday evening was spent at Glen Echo Park. If this article sounds a little mixed up and complicated, it is only because I am still suffering from that wild, thrilling roller-coaster ride that I was persuaded to take. NEVER AGAIN! Some people might think that's fun but if they do they must have iron nerves and must have been riding them a lot longer than I have. My first time was my last and the next person that says, "Let's go ride the roller-coaster" is going to get choked. I'm sure everyone had a swell time at Glen Echo Park and I'll even admit that I did!

On the morning of the third and last day of our stay in Washington, we visited Arlington National Cemetery, the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, the Memorial Amphitheatre, Lee Mansion and last, but not least, we went to historic Mt. Vernon. At Lee Mansion we were all held spellbound by an old Negro who told the story of Robert E. Lee's life in this beautiful mansion. It was so realistic that we felt we had really known Robert E. Lee. Mt. Vernon is a beautiful place that gives you a certain atmosphere of living in the actual time of George Washington. Everything has been restored as it was when he lived there and it was intensely interesting.

I think we all enjoyed our wonderful trip to Washington and my only regret is that we didn't stay longer and see some of the other interesting sights. We had a wonderful time and a lot of fun. We are grateful for having had this opportunity to see and enjoy the sights of Washington, D. C. Miss Gillis and Mr. Rikard were the world's best chaperons. W. C. Moody and Mildred Medford, Francis Pless and Edna Callahan found romance.

SCHOOL ALLOCATIONS APPROVED

The North Carolina Board of Education last week approved $3,328,752 in allocations for construction, improvement and repair of schools throughout the state. The money comes from the state's $50,000,000 school plant fund. These first allotments were split roughly evenly between white and colored schools.

New Soviet Figure

RECENT reports of a purge in high Soviet military circles appeared verified when Gen. Sergei Matveyevich Shtemenko (above) was given the Red Army salute in Moscow's May Day demonstrations. This was an honor previously bestowed only on old-line Red marshals. Gen. Shtemenko is a hitherto unknown figure. (International)

Famous Columnist Has Article On Lt. J. Queen

Lt. James Queen, who lost his life on September 15, 1943, was featured in an article by Robert C. Ruark, noted Scripps-Howard columnist, in the April 28 issue of the New York World-Telegram, and other newspapers of that chain.

Mr. Ruark, one of the top-salaried columnists of the country (in the $75,000 to $100,000 salary bracket) was a close friend of Lt. Queen, and had visited the Queens in Waynesville on a number of occasions. They were roommates at Chapel Hill during their college days, and later were associated in the same offices in Washington.

Mr. Ruark, in writing about the method of selecting unknown soldiers, under the title "Your Unknown" devoted about three-fourths of his column to Lt. Queen. Columnist Ruark points out that the method used is a pagan custom, and a "monument to a stupid conflict." Then he goes on to say:

"My personal Unknown Soldier would be a lad named Jimmy Queen, whose LCI exploded off the coast of Sicily or Italy after enough tough trips bearing ammunition from the base in Bizerte to win him a posthumous decoration. A Jerry dropped one down the stack and that was the end of Jim's boat and the people aboard it."

Queen was a big guy out of Waynesville, N. C., an old roommate, an old fraternity brother, an old counter of my gals and the other way around. He was a handsome guy with infectious dimples and a talent for falling over furniture in such a way as to make every dame in the joint want to comfort him.

He got bounced out of law school for non-devotion to torts, worked for the WPA, decided that was stupid and went back to the law to graduate with honors. He married a swell dame and set up a swell practice and was doing fine when somebody bought him a war he was not even vaguely responsible for.

He could have beat the draft on 3-A, and he could have beat it on a trick knee that made him absolutely 4-F, and even without those two gimmicks he had enough positive connection to stay home and get rich while the other boys did it.

So when the Japs hit Pearl, Queen went down to the Navy and lied about his leg and got himself a two-bit ensign's commission and volunteered for the small craft end of the job and wound up shoving a scow from the Cape Bon peninsula to Italy and Sicily. And always knowing, with the queer intuition of the candidates for death, that he was going to catch one with the top of his head. This was the way a man like Queen repaid a country he liked for allowing him to be born in it and live in it.

So sure enough they blew him up and he was listed as missing and presumably dead and they never found so much as a speck

Lawyer With Bay Window Put in Place

OMAHA, Neb. (UP)—The corpulent attorney watched craftily while the 76-year-old plaintiff bent over to tie a shoelace.

He was fighting her suit to collect damages for injuries in an automobile crash.

"Ha," he snorted, "in spite of your claim of disability, I notice you can tie your shoelace. I can't even do that."

"Well, you could," snapped the elderly woman, "if it weren't for that stomach of yours."
