Missing Heir Given Up By State For Dead

PHILADELPHIA (UP) — The state has given up its long search for Henry Homer, missing heir who walked out of a nursing home eight years ago with eight cents in his pocket.

Homer's disappearance never was solved despite a nation-wide search, so the orphans' court awarded his $32,000 estate to four relatives.

The missing man, 26 years old when he vanished from the nursing home at suburban Devon, Pa., was the grandson of the late Chief Justice William S. Gummere of the New Jersey Supreme Court.

Homer and his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth G. Homer, were patients at the institution under care of neurologists. Mrs. Homer died Jan. 21, 1942, five days before her son vanished. At that time, Homer remarked: "Now that mother is gone, what will happen to me?"

The trust fund he inherited on his mother's death was held by the court during the eight-year waiting period. Then the missing man was declared presumably dead.

Cinnamon toast is an old standby when unexpected guests drop in in the evening. Just toast bread slices and butter them appetizingly while they're hot. Sprinkle the buttered toast with a combination of sugar and cinnamon (using either white or brown sugar) and put the slices under the broiler for a few minutes. Cut in triangles and serve.
