Adventists Preparing for Atom War

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Seventh Day Adventists are preparing for a possible atom war as they did for World War II.

"We are not pacifists but we want to help save the peace by helping the government," the Rev. Carlyle B. Haynes said after a general conference committee of the Seventh Day Adventist churches here. The committee voted to organize a nation-wide civilian defense and disaster relief service in preparedness for World War III.

"We began giving medical aid courses and casualty training in 1933," Haynes said. "Twelve thousand of the young men we trained were drafted into the medical corps of the armed forces, and many of our young women joined the same groups."

Stockpiling Started

"We are carrying out the recommendations of the National Security Resources Board, stockpiling bandages, oxygen, plasmas, drugs, and antibiotics. Litter bearers will be trained, and all our people will be prepared to care for many of the effects of atom bombing."

The NSRB has emphasized that it would be unrealistic to prepare for fewer than 40,000 severely burned persons from a single atomic explosion, without counting those injured by flying debris and mechanical means.

Ideal care of one severely burned patient, according to case histories made at Nagasaki and Hiroshima, would include provisions for 42 tanks of oxygen, three nurses, 2.7

miles of gauze, 36 pints of plasma, 40 pints of whole blood, and 100 pints of other fluids plus drugs such as morphine and the antibiotics.

Ready for Emergency

"Through our stockpiling, Seventh Day Adventist groups all over the country will be able to take over immediately in the event of such disasters," Haynes said.

"Since 60 per cent of atom bomb casualties were found to be burns, our resources will be centered particularly around those medicines, but we will also be prepared for other wounds caused by bombs, falling debris, blasts, or whatever comes."

"We are not alarmists. The Seventh Day Adventists want to help their government in war as in peace. We are accumulating a five-man board to supervise training of 450 to 500 employees at our local headquarters.

"Their duties will include atom raid drills, training of litter bearers to bring in casualties, and encouragement of women to insure a plentiful supply of bandages and minor medical supplies."

Effects to Be Studied

"Since the effects of atom bombing and fission differ within varying areas, we will study the needs of people found in the center of the target, one-half mile away, or some distance from that center."

"The National Security Resources Board has estimated that 250 loaded freight cars would be necessary to bring medical supplies to Washington, if raided. All local and regional Adventist headquarters, including churches, schools, and medical institutions are being ordered to follow the recommendations of the NSRB.

"Meanwhile, we will continue to

ATTACK VICTIM FACES DEATH

Doctors at a Winston-Salem hospital today were fighting to save the life of 17-year-old Betty Jane Clifton, while police scoured the city for the man who brutally beat her. The pretty girl, who wanted to be a nurse, was found on the floor of her father's radio shop, her face battered and her skull apparently fractured.
