Warners' 'Colt .45' In Technicolor, At Strand Soon

"Colt .45," one of the most important Western drama films produced by Warner Bros. in recent years, begins its local engagement on Sunday at the Strand Theatre.

Filed in Technicolor and starring Randolph Scott and Ruth Roman, and featuring also Zachary Scott, "Colt .45" is the story of the six-shooter, the first western that came into the west with the forces of law and order. Up until that time, men fired single shot guns.

Randolph Scott plays the role of a Colt salesman who brings two pairs of the weapons to a certain town in Wyoming. When one set is stolen by outlaw chief Zachary Scott, it falls to Randolph to buckle on a pair of the fast-firing "equalizers" and go after the bandits.

How he succeeds forms the greater part of the new action film. Indians appear throughout the film, this time on the side of the law as R. Scott enlists their aid to stalk the lawless gang.

In the middle of all the hard riding and shooting comes the lovely Ruth Roman, one of Hollywood's most rapidly-rising stars. As the wife of one of the outlaws, she has more than her share of the action in the story, but finally goes over to the lawful side as personified by the handsome Randolph Scott.

Filed on location in the California hills, "Colt .45" is said to contain scenes of unsurpassed beauty for those who like outdoor beauty along with their action film fare.

A total of 5,946,915 fans paid to see All-America Conference pro football games during the league's four years.
