

Bishop Harrell Pleased With World-Wide Program

Bishop Costen J. Harrell, general superintendent of the Charlotte Area of the Methodist Church, has returned to Lake Junaluska Assembly grounds, having come from New York City, where he attended a meeting of the Finance Committee of the church-wide Advance for Christ and his Church movement. The purpose of the meeting, July 12, 13, over which Bishop Harrell presided, he said was to review the achievements of the Methodist Advance during the past two years—the mid period.

The Bishop expressed satisfaction with the progress made in support of the Methodist-wide Advance movement, whose purpose, he explained, is to maintain the level of missionary giving attained during the Crusade for Christ, an emergency appeal during the preceding Methodist quadrennium for missions and war relief. The missionary program of The Methodist Church is at top level, he said.

He suspended another sentence of two years for each of the two brothers on condition they remain on good behavior for five years following the expiration of their prison terms.

Jerry, 26, drew the prison term on one count of a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. This was in the case in which State Highway Patrolman Joe Murrill's auto was struck by a rifle bullet.

His suspended sentence was on the count of firing on the car carrying Deputies Sheriff Max Cochran, Wade McDaniel and John Kerley.

Oliver, 33, husband and father of six children, drew the prison term on the count of firing on the car bearing the deputies.

His suspended sentence was on the count involving the shooting at the state highway patrol car.

The judge made the suspended sentence consecutive to the actual prison term.

He passed sentence shortly after noon after hearing testimony in regard to the defendants' characters, from Jackson County Sheriff Griffin Middleton and State Highway Patrolman John L. Carpenter, Deputy Cochran and Policeman Jerry Rogers also testified.

He also questioned both the defendants regarding their previous records, military service records, occupation and family status.

Before passing the sentence, which was the maximum for the charge on which they were convicted, Judge Pless told the brothers, "I think you are exceedingly fortunate that the jury showed mercy in convicting you of a misdemeanor."

He warned them that "if you continue in a life of crime—which I believe you will—that you endanger the lives of others, and consequently your own."

The judge told the men also that "you can make more money—more spendable money—cutting pulp than you can out of crime."

The main satisfaction in life, he continued, is derived from having done the duty which the human being was put on earth to perform.

In his opening statements, he declared that anyone who fires on an officer to avoid detection for a misdemeanor certainly shows a "bad sense of values."

He warned that such action could lead to the gas chamber.

The judge also told the defendants that they had a choice between serving their current sentences and serving four full years (which would be the case in violation of the conditions of the suspended sentence); between freedom and liberty, or life in prison.

Freight Engine Plunges Down Bank, Kills Three

The lead locomotive of a double-header Yadkin Railroad freight train lies in a field after scalding two crewmen to death and another fatally injured in a plunge down a bank near Salisbury. The second engine was derailed but did not turn over. Railway officials said the derailment apparently was caused by dirt scraped over the track on a grade crossing. The train was bound for Albemarle. (AP Photo).

first assumed the office of first vice president of the Lions Club, has served as club president for three years. He has been active in Red Cross, polo and other kindred campaigns. He has also served as chaplain of the Masons.

He has served as part-time pastor of the Francis Cove and Ratcliffe Cove Baptist churches.

Rev. Mr. Elliott is a native of South Carolina, a graduate of Furman University, and the Southern Baptist Seminary of Louisville. He held pastorates at York and Simpsonville, S. C., prior to coming here.

Mrs. Elliott and Elizabeth have been active in the First Baptist choir, while Wilson has handled the projection machine, radio and public address system controls of the church.

Plans are for Rev. Mr. Elliott to preach his last sermon here on Sunday evening of August 13th. The intervening two weeks will be used, he said, in resting, and moving to their new home in Roxboro.

Pless denied a motion and arguments of the defense to set aside the verdicts as to one count in each case.

Officer Rogers told the court that he found two sticks of wood and a rock in the cell occupied by Jerry Smith and a penknife on Jerry's person prior to the trial. On cross-examination, he said the cell contained bunks for other prisoners.

Sheriff Middleton told the court he had been fired on once while he was searching for a still near the Smith home but that he did not see who did the shooting.

He said he had known Jerry Smith for about ten years, but didn't "know much about Oliver."

Jerry Smith told the court in reply to the judge's questions, that he had been sentenced once on a liquor violation, twice for fighting.

Oliver, when questioned regarding his previous record, said he had served a year in the state of Washington on a second-degree burglary conviction in 1937, and later 19 days on a disorderly conduct count.

Each had good records in military service. Jerry served four and one-half years in the Army during World War II, Oliver, a shorter period after the war.

The Smiths, tried last Wednesday on two counts each of secret assault with a deadly weapon, were found guilty Thursday by the jury of assault with a deadly weapon.

The jurors, all men, first returned to the court room with verdicts of guilty of assault and battery.

However, Judge Pless sent them out again to arrive at another verdict, explaining that they could not arrive at a finding in assault and battery.

He said they could decide on whether one or both of the defendants were guilty of secret assault with a deadly weapon, with assault with a deadly weapon, or not guilty.

The final verdict was returned about two hours after the jury had left the court to start considering the testimony.

Musical With Cast Of Over 150 Local People To Be Given This Week

A cast of more than 150 Waynesville men, women, and children is being selected this week for "Trippin' Around," a musical variety show set for July 21-22 at the Waynesville Township High School auditorium.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bergmann, Jr., of Asheville, owners of "Pilot Productions," are producing the musical for the sponsoring Waynesville chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority.

The proceeds from the performances will go into the fund which will finance the building of the sorority's Community Club House.

Mrs. Harry Liner, Jr., the chapter's vice-president, is serving as general chairman for the production.

Mr. and Mrs. Bergmann announced today that rehearsals would start soon and would be held every afternoon and evening at the high school auditorium.

This production already has proved both a popular and financial success in several other western North Carolina cities and towns where the Bergmanns have held it under local sponsorship—Black Mountain, Hendersonville, Marion, and Lenoir.

In each case, the cast was made up of local talent—high school and grammar grade students, businessmen and businesswomen, and housewives.

Among the features of the show will be a local baby contest, a contest to pick the "friendliest family," four choruses totalling approximately 50 members, and a wide variety of specialty performances.

The "friendliest family," and the baby champion are selected by popular vote. The winners are announced and rewarded during the show.

To stage the production, the Bergmanns brought to Waynesville some $2,000 worth of colorful costumes and equipment.

Singing and dancing will be the Red Cap chorus, made up of high school girls, the Starlet chorus of young businesswomen, Darktown Strutters, comprising young mothers, and Niagara Falls chorus, consisting of high school students, all performing in costume.

In addition to this, there will be singing performances by children selected from the community.

The Bergmanns, who come well recommended by the members of the Black Mountain Chamber of Commerce, both are members of the Asheville Chamber of Commerce.

Last January rounded out years of their work in training local casts for the production of home-talent benefit shows.

These were staged for clubs and other organizations throughout the nation, though right now they are concentrating on productions in North Carolina.

Mrs. Bergmann, a native Texan, majored in music and minor drama at the Texas College of Business and Industries at Kingsville.

She later took post-graduate work at the Steinfeld College of Music in San Antonio, Southern University at Memphis, Tennessee, and the University of the Southwestern Choral Institute at Memphis, and the University of Texas.

Her work in dramatics also includes four years' service as director in charge of the music and dramatic departments of Ursula Academy in Lareb, Texas. At the same time, she directed the Glee Club at the same school.

She also served eight years as choir director of the First Methodist Churches of Laredo, Texas. Pharr, is an active Methodist member of the Order of the Eastern Star.

Mrs. Bergmann is producing director of "Trippin' Around," is in charge of training the cast and choruses.

Mr. Bergmann, the company's general business manager, handles promotion and publicity and in charge of the stage and auditorium procedures.

Educated at Culver Military Academy in Indiana, McBurney School and Dwight School, both in New York City, worked with a major production company in promotion and publicity and as advance agent three years.

He's the son of Dr. and Mrs. W. Bergmann, Sr., of Asheville. The Bergmanns' first production of "Trippin' Around" was used in Black Mountain last April, and been a success ever since.

Gypsum has been used as a plaster since ancient times.
