Sidelights Of The News

Hard, Or Must I Not?

Story is being told of the man who put a sign on his pepper during a recent shortage. The sign read: "only one to a customer." During a rush period, the sign was knocked from the pepper shelf. A groceryman noticed the sign and suddenly picked it up. He did not realize the sign was for a jar of mustard. He saw what had happened to his storeroom, brought cases of mustard and after it on the shelf, put the sign in its rightful place. No more was said that day.

Ed Kills A Sale

Waynesville man was driving along Highway 19-23, when he shot past like a madman at a car. The car broke all rules of common sense, and safe driving. Hours later, the reckless driver walked into the place of the man who he had recklessly passed on a curve, opening his sales spiel as he held his briefcase, started to show his samples. The businessman recognized the traveler. Stiffening, he said: "man that drives as reckless as you has nothing I want, so good-bye."

Did You Noticed?

Think. Have you missed the sight on Main street during the last few days? Remember the big buses we used to see so many times during the day and toiling tirelessly on their carrying passengers to all of the county, state and county. Well, they will be only a memory. And take a look down Main street and see how big the trucks look. Somehow, we will find their friendly presence.

Burley Market May Get More Buyers For 1950

Western North Carolina burley grower representatives returned home last week-end, cheered by their visits earlier in the week with tobacco company executives and U. S. Department of Agriculture officials. Oral Yates of Iron Duff, president of the Haywood County Farm Bureau, one of the burley men who made the trip, said a USDA official had assured them two sets of graders would be assigned to the Asheville market this year if extra buyers are provided. The official was James Thigpen of Oxford, head of the Tobacco Branch. In New York, Mr. Yates reported, two tobacco firms promised to send buyers to the market this year. W. A. Blount, an executive of Liggett & Myers, though making no commitments for his firm, said the request for extra buyers would be given careful consideration. The two other firms requested that their names be withheld from publication for the present. Taking part in the conference with Mr. Thigpen and the Tar Heel growers were U. S. Rep. Monroe Redden of Hendersonville, and Jack Lynn, former Haywood farm agent who is now a legislative representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation. Members of the WNC burley delegation in addition to Mr. Yates, included Tom Woody of Madison county, Jonathan Brown, Jackson, and Creed Morgan, Buncombe.

Youths Arrested In Thefts Of 8 Automobiles

Four boys, ranging from 12 to 14 years of age, were arrested last week in the theft of eight automobiles during the last four to five months. Haywood Juvenile Court Judge Hugh Leatherwood, in a hearing Friday afternoon placed two of the youths on probation until they are 16 years of age. The two others, already under probation from Jackson county, were remanded for final action to the Jackson Superior Court clerk. The latter two had been placed on the earlier probation condition for an alleged theft attempt at the air strip near Sylva last winter. The youths were taken Thursday night following an investigation growing out of an auto accident Wednesday night on the Allens Creek road, when one of the cars stolen ran off the highway into a ditch. Mr. Leatherwood, describing all the boys as "members of nice families," said after the hearing that the youngsters apparently were just bored, had nothing to do, and were looking for excitement when they decided to take the autos. Waynesville policemen recovered one of the two autos stolen Thursday night even before the owner, Jack Rogers, knew his car was stolen. All the youths pleaded guilty after they were arrested, and admitted the thefts of the eight cars.

Checks Scene Of His Childhood

GENERAL HARLEY B. FERGUSON was caught by the staff photographer as he casually studied a map of Haywood County in the Mountaineer office. General Ferguson, a native of Waynesville, is now a resident of Washington. Although retired, he is still frequently consulted on major engineering problems. In 1932 he was assigned the task of inaugurating the Mississippi Flood Control program. He successfully carried out the program from 1932 to 1939 at a cost of approximately $350,000,000. He often tells the story of getting the idea of straightening the Mississippi and deepening the channel from seeing farmers plow in Raccoon Creek just below town when he was a school boy. ### Program At Junaluska Is Nearing A Climax

The Rev. Dr. Dawson Bryan, of Nashville, Tennessee, noted churchman in the field of evangelism and a connecticut of the national Board of Evangelism of The Methodist Church, was the featured preacher Sunday morning at the Lake Junaluska Assembly. Speaking on "Why I Believe In Immortality," from the text in John 14, Dr. Bryan said: "There is no mathematical proof of immortality—no one has even seen anyone return from the dead. But the assurance of immortality is as real as the love of a mother. Science has discovered that there is no loss of any physical substance. Matter is never destroyed—only changed. "If God will never destroy any physical substance, it is incredible to think he will destroy human personality. Instead, God assures us that a human soul lives forever. Every desire we possess may be satisfied: hunger, desire for friends, except the desire to keep on living. God surely will perpetuate the greatest of our desires. "Jesus believed in life, and assured us that life beyond this earth is a reality. 'I go to prepare a place for you.' "No conviction is greater or more comforting than the practically universal desire for life everlasting and to those who believe in Christ it is a reality." Announced speakers for August 28-31, when a Bible Conference will mark the closing event of the 1950 season, are: Dr. Andrew H. Blackwood, of Princeton University; Bishop Paul B. Kern, Nashville, Tennessee; and Dr. W. G. Chanter, of Drew University.

Pupils Ride In 3 Brand New Buses

Haywood County's district schools opened their doors this morning for the first time since last Spring to welcome some 6,300 students as the new term began. Other pupils still had another week of vacation left. St. John's of Waynesville and the town schools of Canton won't open till September 5, day after Labor Day. The Negro grammar grade students of Waynesville still were uncertain as to whether classes would start for them today or in another week. The Haywood Board of Education was waiting this morning for a final State Board decision on their appeal from the order consolidating the Waynesville colored elementary school with Reynolds School in Canton. County Schools Superintendent Jack Messer said the probability was that the colored grade school here would start at Reynolds next week. Both teachers of the school here were allotted to Reynolds when the consolidation order was issued earlier this year. During the last school term, 58 pupils attended the classes ranging from the first through the sixth grades at the Pigeon Street School. The state authorities decided the school was too small, and ordered consolidation. Reynolds, completed in 1948, was prepared for the extra population; the construction had anticipated the influx of extra students, provided more classrooms than immediate demands had called for. Many of the rural children rode to their first classes in brand new buses, too. Last week, the state sent three 1950 model Fords, with a seating capacity of 60 students each, to the county to replace as many 1940 models. The new ones have standing room also for 20 more. In the future, the school system will receive three more new buses, bringing the total Haywood fleet to 32 for the 1950-51 school year. Last year, the state replaced three of the 1939 models with as many new buses, and this year is starting to replace the 1940's and 1941's. The children found the new buses equipped with front-facing seats, more comfortable than the old models, in which the seats were fixed to the sides so that the passengers faced each other. The new ones also are equipped with built-in heaters to protect the (See Schools—Page 6)

Mother Of Missing Soldier Still Has Hope

Wilson, of Waynesville, known as "Buddy" Wright, was reported missing in action since July 29 while serving on the South Korean front with the 24th Infantry Division. Adjutant General Edward F. Witsell explained in his letter that "experience has shown that many persons reported missing in action are subsequently reported as returned to duty or being hospitalized for injuries." The letter also said that additional information would be forwarded without delay to Mrs. Wright as soon as it was received.
