lieve the austere look, says Victor Vito, New York hairdresser. Mr. Vito is one of the chief supporters of the short hairdo, but he points out that it must be carefully done, sculptured to flatter the face and glamorized by the right earrings. Here is his prescription for various types of faces.

SQUARE FACE . . . Bangs slightly up at corners, long pendant earrings length to the face.
OVAL FACE . . . Empire bangs and a center part are perfect for the wavy-haired. Earrings required.
LONG FACE . . . Victor Vito recommends asymmetrical bangs and short chunky earrings for width.
LARGE FACE . . . Fluffy hairdo softens features, and large pendant earrings provide balance, says Vito.

MORE ABOUT Cobb

But from a distance and close at hand, he's watched Waynesville grow from a small, relatively isolated mountain community into a modern, progressive municipality.
Since he and the 11 other children of the Rev. Needham Bryan Cobb moved with their parents from Chapel Hill to Waynesville in the Summer of 1883, he's missed relatively few summers here.
"Tyn" Cobb, as his friends call him, wrote much of the news that has become a part of Waynesville's history.
Among the many events he covered was the arrival of the first train.
In those days, he relates, he would go out and get his news story, then rush back to the office and set it in type himself, to see it printed later on an old Washington hand press.
When he brought his family here from the eastern part of the state, the Rev. Mr. Cobb built a cottage off the Jonathan Creek Road on what has been known ever since then as Cobb's Hill.
The work as a reporter was "Tyn" Cobb's second position in Waynesville.
When Mr. Cobb arrived in Waynesville, W. T. Crawford was preparing to campaign for his first term in Congress.
To fill in for him while he was campaigning, he engaged young Cobb in his position with the Howell and Rogers Store on Main Street.
When the Congressman-to-be ended his campaign, he returned to the store, and young "Tyn", who was 16 at the time, became a newspaperman shortly afterward.
A few months later, however, he gave up his reporting career to become an agent and telegraph operator for the railroad at Bryson City, which then was known as Charleston.
In 1905 he was back in the newspaper business again, however, and this time as a publisher. He operated the Freeport, Ill., Daily Journal until 1915.
World War I found him working for Bethlehem Steel's mines, in Cuba and serving also as civilian agent to Naval Intelligence there.
He moved to his present home town of Orlando, Fla., in 1922 and, between summers in Waynesville, he stays with one of his sons, N. T. Cobb, Jr., owner of a color printing firm and former Florida State representative from Orange County.
Since 1922, he's spent every summer here, however.
The Rev. Mr. Cobb lived here only three years after he first brought his family to Waynesville, then moved to the eastern part of the state.
But "Tyn" remained here.
One of his brothers once taught school in Waynesville to earn money for continuing his education at the University of North Carolina.
He was Collier Cobb, later to establish his reputation as one of North Carolina's most brilliant state geologists.
"Tyn" Cobb, who was born in Elizabeth City, has covered a lot of territory and lived in many places.
But he never forgets he's "Tar Heel born and a Tar Heel bred."
His son, N. T., Jr., also has visited Waynesville frequently, and many Florida people have learned Western North Carolina rather intimately from their personal boosting of this section.

deciding to locate, and selected Waynesville for several reasons. "The diversified income of the people, the friendliness of the citizens, the progressive spirit, and alertness of the business firms sold me on this place. I see a great future for this section, and the spirit of the people is commendable. They are up and doing—going places, and I want to get in and do my part."
The stocks of the firm have been increased and a large, and varied assortment is now being offered.

Last Rites Held In Bryson City For Judge Bryson

Funeral services were held Wednesday in the Presbyterian Church in Bryson City for Thaddeus Dillard Bryson, 76, retired superior court judge and former professor of law at Duke University.
Judge Bryson died Monday night at his home in Bryson City after a long illness.
He became judge of what is now the 20th Judicial District in 1918 after a career as a lawyer and solicitor. He retained his judgeship until 1926. In 1927 he became a professor of law at Duke and retired because of ill health in 1947.
Long prominent in legal circles the judge was instrumental in obtaining the act establishing the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.
Surviving are the widow Mrs. Zulia Ketchie Bryson; and the following children: Mrs. A. J. Franklin, Jr., of Goldsboro, superintendent of public welfare in Wayne County; T. D. Bryson, Jr., of Bryson City, solicitor for the 20th judicial district; Ed C. Bryson of Durham, professor of law at Duke University; Mrs. H. G. Singleton of Asheville; Mrs. Meredith Moore of Gainesville, Fla.; Mrs. Johnny Martin of Norfolk, Va.; and Miss Elizabeth Bryson of Bryson City.
A brother, Dr. D. R. Bryson, of Bryson City and a sister, Mrs. W. H. Tipton of Black Mountain also survive.
Rev. George Holderith, C.S.C., has been the Notre Dame golf coach since 1933.
