Date Change Only For GI's Already Studying

A recent Veterans Administration extension of the July 25, 1951, cut-off date for resuming GI Bill training applies only to veterans who already started their studies and are prevented from going on with them by reason of their return to active military or naval duty.

But, the VA said, the extension does not apply to those veterans who had never had GI Bill training at the time they re-entered active service. For them, the July 25, 1951, date still holds.

The VA explained that its decision to extend the cut-off date for veterans stopping training in order to go into active service is entirely consistent with the law and with a VA regulation of April 1 on the deadline.

That regulation states that veterans actually must be in training on July 25, 1951, if they want to continue afterwards. The only exception is for an interruption for reasons beyond a veteran's control. An interruption for the purpose of going on active duty, the VA ruled, falls within that category.

Veterans who interrupt their studies in order to enter military service will be permitted to resume their training within a reasonable period following their release from service—even though they get out after the deadline date.

Under the law, the July 25, 1951, cut-off date applies to World War II veterans discharged before July 25, 1947. For those few discharged afterwards, the cut-off date is four years from date of discharge.

Q—Does the July 25, 1951, cut-off date for starting GI Bill training also apply to disabled veterans? A—No. However, disabled veterans may not be furnished training under Public Law 16 after

Wisdom of God, we would by Thee be taught
Control our minds, direct our every thought;
Knowledge alone life's problems cannot meet;
We learn to live while sitting at Thy feet.
Light of the world, illumine us we pray.

Dead Eye for Deceit
If you think counting sand at the seashore is impossible, consider a new instrument counts invisible particles in a million billion times smaller than a grain of sand. The "counter" can spot particles less than a millionth of an inch in diameter. And by comparison, a grain weighs roughly one million times more.

Our souls are dark, without kindling ray.
Torches unlighted, at all radance bare.
Touch them to flame, in glory there.
The greatest ability is ability.
I finish the job regardless of the cost.
