IN MEMORIAM In memory of our Mother, Mrs. Daisy Queen Lyle, who departed this life Dec. 8, 1949 and our father John Lyle who passed away Dec. 25, 1944.

Memories are treasures no one can steal. Death leaves a heartache no one can heal. You are not forgotten, though you are gone. We will miss you always no matter how long.

Our days are long and lonesome. Our pleasures are but few. The happiest hours we ever spent were spent my dear with you.

In our hearts there is a picture. More precious than silver or gold. It is a loving picture of you. Whose memories will never grow old.

God gave us strength to bear it. Courage to fight the blow. But what it was to lose you. No one will ever know.

The Lyle Children. By Nell Lyle Ledford.

DOUBTS HOMEWORK'S VALUE STRAND—SUN., MON., & TUES

NEW YORK—(AP)—How valuable is homework? It may have no value, says Dr. James V. McGill, first assistant in social studies in New York City's John Adams High School, writing in "High Points", a magazine published by the New York City Board of Education. Dr. McGill enlisted four Adams High School social studies teachers in a two-term experiment. On the basis of ability and intelligence tests, they paired off 185 pupils, half in classes where no homework was required, the other half in classes with daily homework. Tests at the end of the year showed about the same level of achievement. However, cautious Dr. McGill, let's not follow this conclusion out the window. A great deal of research must still be instituted in allied fields, particularly in the various branches of English, to ascertain whether the nature of the subject matter is a factor in the result obtained.
