fine and cost from his wife and two children in Biltmore. The court suggested he call his wife and have it sent over, and save him a trip to Asheville. The mayor decided that a 32-day suspended sentence was deserved, and gave him the usual opportunity to make bond and pay up. The man was still twisting his hat nervously when court adjourned.

Two colored men were charged with taking $80 worth of copper tubing, and selling it for $5. One claimed he went along just for company with the other, and did not know what was taking place. He did admit helping drink some of the liquor bought with the $5. Neither man could recall when, where, or under what circumstances they bought the liquor. One said: "We met a white man, and he sold us a batwing." Later the other testified: "We just ran into a man who wanted to sell some liquor."

One of the defendants, so anxious to tell the truth, held both hands high when taking the oath. Mayor Way refused to try a case in which a taxi driver was charged with transporting. He stated the incident took place outside his jurisdiction, and was a matter of interpreting law. The arrest was made by a highway patrolman.

The patrolman had written the attorney general's office and had a ruling that a taxi caught with liquor several days after purchase, could be interpreted as not taking it from an ABC store home, but hauling it for the purpose of sale. The law allows transportation of a gallon per car from a legal store to the owner's residence.

The Mountaineer learned that in the event Rep. Yates and Senator Medford fail to agree on the proposal, that the House will name a Conference committee, and so will the Senate. This impartial committee will study the merits of the bill, and make a report to their respective branches of the General Assembly. The reports of the conference committees are always adopted in full.

ADJOURNMENT SEEN BY APRIL ELEVENTH

Rep. Yates told The Mountaineer he believed the General Assembly would adjourn by April 11. The committees are fast finishing their work, and members are working from early until late each day.

Rep. Yates said his typical day started Wednesday shortly after seven, and he got back to his hotel at six, without taking time out for lunch. "Everyone is pushing to get through, and go home," he said.

REP. YATES PLANS TO GO TO WASHINGTON

Rep. Yates plans to fly to Washington sometime Friday in regards to a special piece of national legislation. He plans to confer with congressmen from North Carolina about the matter. He did not state the nature of the legislation.

the proposed bill making a 30-day jail sentence mandatory for all persons convicted of driving while drunk.

Somehow, Haywood's patrolmen have learned the knack of being at the most unsuspected places at the right time. Often they interchange cars, go in pairs, and always have their radios tuned with each other. Their system has brought satisfactory results this far—and what they have learned of Haywood drivers will go along way in making many an arrest.

Their chief concern is keeping the highways safe, and those who forget that will find themselves dealing with a pretty "hard-boiled" group of patrolmen.

MORE ABOUT Congress

ham, and he is now secretary of the House subcommittee on mines. C. E. Brown, secretary to Rep. Redden is also mentioned as the other man from Haywood.

In a recent issue, The Times-News of Hendersonville, carried a story from their Washington correspondent, as follows:

WASHINGTON—Will Rep. Monroe M. Redden decide in the next few months that he spoke too hastily when he announced he would not be a candidate to succeed himself?

Or will he stick to his guns about retiring from Congress—but run instead for governor?

And if he does the latter, will there be a wide open race in the mountainous twelfth district, or will the political powers that operate there be able to narrow the field down to reasonable proportions?

All those questions were being asked around Washington this week on the heels of the annual banquet of the North Carolina Democratic Club, an event which drew to the nation's capital an unusually large number of political-minded residents of the state.

Redden made the categorical assertion, for publication, earlier this year that he would not run. But it is being reported around now that (1) Don S. Elias, one of the Hendersonville man's most influential backers, doesn't want him to retire and that (2) Mrs. Redden, who once didn't like Washington, now is already bemoaning their prospective departure from the busy capital.

Elias is reported to have told people in and out of North Carolina politics that "Redden will run for Congress again," but on the other hand, some sources who know the Asheville publisher well say that Elias is seriously considering throwing Redden into the gubernatorial race.

Redden, on the other hand, says nothing from his home in Hendersonville, where he retreated some days before the banquet.

So, you pay your money and you take your choice.

But assuming that Redden does stick by his decision not to run again for Congress, who will be in the race to succeed him?

In Washington this week, they're saying that the most certain candidate is Solicitor John M. Queen of Waynesville—there even was a mid-week report that his announcement for the post would be forthcoming in a few days.

But they're also saying that Harry Buchanan, Hendersonville theater magnate who has long been regarded as one of North Carolina's most potent lobbyists before the General Assembly, has his eye on the job.

There's been talk around ever since Redden's announcement of his forthcoming abdication that his political protégé, Dick Queen of Waynesville; his secretary, Cliff Brown of Clyde, and his political patron, Elias himself, might make the race. And this talk hasn't died down much, either, although presumably Dick Queen, a nephew of the solicitor, would take himself out of the race if his Uncle John should decide to run.

The political pot appears to be definitely boiling in the twelfth—and with months to go before announcing time, it may well boil over before the situation clears.

Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, was elected to the American Hall of Fame in 1947.

wards the project.

Members of the Club are planting additional dogwood trees along Highway No. 19-A and 23, between the Welch Farm and the intersection of the highway. Trees for this project are being given by Mrs. June Smathers.

Harry Lee Limer has planted 154 trees on his development on Allens Creek.

The men of Allens Creek have dug, and hauled trees, and in instances where private landowners did not care to plant the tree, the men of the community have set out the trees free of charge.

Mrs. Sifer said that Dr. I. B. Funke had contributed many trees for the community plantings.

Trees are also being planted at the East Waynesville, and Hazelwood schools in honor of Jack Messer, former county superintendent of education, who was recalled into active Naval duty this past February.
