

At The Strand Wednesday & Thursday

Alex Nichol and Mark Stevens, American airmen shot down by Nazi interceptor planes, seek underground information from Suzanne Dalbert and Jean DeBriac in this tense scene from Universal-International's dramatic "Target Unknown." The new film, directed by George Sherman and produced by Aubrey Schenck, uses the heretofore untold story of the Nazi interrogation of captured Allied flyers as its story premise. Don Taylor, Joyce Holden, Robert Douglas and Gig Young are also starred in "Target Unknown." George Sherman directed.

when PROTECTION counts

Sometimes people see the need for protection only when it's too late. Locking the barn door after the horse has been stolen is an age-old fable of futility.

All of us guard against dangers that appear imminent. Threat of flood drives us to building levees, piling sandbags. But too often the inevitable dangers that threaten our families' security are disregarded or forgotten.

For most of us the only real guarantee of the future security of our families is life insurance. Why not examine your own situation? Are your wife and children protected—or are you taking the risk of waiting until it's too late?
