Penicillin for Cows

Penicillin, used for treating cows with mastitis, can also affect the processing of butterfat and cottage cheese. Farmers using penicillin for mastitis should hold out milk from treated cows for two or three days following treatment. By that time, effects of the penicillis usually are gone. Extremely small amounts of penicillin in milk will prevent proper acid development. Treatment of one quarter of one cow's udder may result in trouble at the dairy plant even though the milk may be mixed with that from 20 cows. It will be better business to dump a few pails of milk than to risk having a whole can rejected upon delivery.
