A Chinese screen used as a wall panel behind a sideboard is a noteworthy feature of this Regency dining room. The entire breakfast table grouping is of inland mahogany and yew wood against a setting of safe-au-lait walls and beige tufted cotton carpeting. Candelabra on the sideboard provide decorative illumination, while light for the dining table comes from a spot concealed overhead in the ceiling. Otto Zenke room, William A. Berkey furniture.

Fall Shoes To Couple 'Feel', Tone

Newest footwear fashions for Fall are "goody two shoes" that have distinctive combinations of textures, and colors making them outstanding. This type of shoe gives the same double-duty, double-life appeal of all the other "convertible" fashions roundabout, claims the National Shoe Institute. Besides the traditional all-suede or all-calf shoe, leather combinations galore will garb the best-dressed foot this Fall, suede with lustrous calf or a pick-me-up trim of high-shine patent, calf, with reptile, or metallic patent with suede. The leather-and-fabric shoe is also news-worthy especially when it's yarn-dyed flannel combined with sleek calf or patent. Because of the widely accepted trend to dark colors in coats and suits, Fall shoes appear on the dark side too. But they're far from mere go-with-everything basics.

Black has been combined with brown in striking effects. And black with red makes exciting fashion news for shoes as well. The browns in Fall shoes are a complete panorama in themselves. This Fall, it's "fur-toned" browns, like the greyed dark brown called Manoa, perfect in both suede and smooth leathers; or French Mocha, the new coffee shade at its best in soft suede. There are spicy browns, too, like Spicetang. And russet shades like Turftan and Russet Glow appear for more casual wear. In addition, yarn-dye fashion has revived the grey shoe, striking in charcoal grey flannel or new gun-metal metallic leather used alone or combined with suede. Grey also makes a good foil for black in the two-tone shoe. Open toes are likely to be wide open; open sling backs become backless in the new mule pump. On the other hand, there's the fashion trend to delicate, dressy closed pumps built on the new tapered toe lasts or sometimes with a slender tapered heel. Mathematicians say that a machine could be built to play perfect chess or to orchestrate a melody.

Fashions Flatter The Taller Gal

Particularly flattering to the tall woman are new Fall fashions. For contrary to last season's sheath slim lines, newest gracefully full skirts tend to make the least of the distance between waist and ankle. The present flurry of king sized buttons, generally flapped and asymmetrically placed pockets, full flared collars, big lapels and bat winged sleeves, dramatically cuffed all serve to cut the length of the torso, says Peg Newton who de-

Its big, chunky, dramatic, center of interest pieces are in perfect proportion to the tall girl's frame.
