Dear Judy

The reason there is not much enthusiasm about horses in the sub-deb set these days is that horseback riding has become a pretty expensive proposition, says Nancy Imboden, 15, of Bronxville, N. Y., who will ride in the National Horse Show at Madison Square Garden. Says she:

"It costs so much to rent a horse that sometimes girls who would normally be interested in riding must forego the desire. So there are fewer young equestriennes each year."

Nancy, who owns her own horse, doesn't think it would be very practical for a group to own a horse (which would be one solution to the problem of expenses). She thinks that if four or five girls shared the ownership of a horse, they would be likely to get into squabbles about expenses and sharing the work—and of course riding the horse. However, she does think that two good friends might own a horse and share it. Says she:

"If two girls had a horse it should work out fine. It would certainly be a big help and cut down on expenses. But even then you'd like to know the girl pretty well."

Nancy, who started riding at the age of eight, has seven horse show championships to her credit this season and has her eye on two juvenile classics at the show—an eight-jump course and an equitation championship—concerned with general competence on horseback, seat, hands and control of the mount. About 50 riders from all sections of the United States will compete in each of these title events.

Youngsters in the jumps must ride "hunter seat," which is supposed to mirror the perfect form for the hunting field or in taking the horse over any obstacle. Nancy has mastered both this and the "saddle seat" style required in the other event. She has won cham-

RIPPED FLAG MENACES STUNT MAN

A STARTLED AUDIENCE watches anxiously while Arnim Dahl, Hamburg, Germany, acrobat, faces death as the flag to which he is clinging begins to rip, leaving him swinging nine floors above the ground. Dahl, who undertook the flag stunt for publicity, was rescued. (International)

... share in caring for him. And whether you live in a city and must ride in a park or live in the country and have lots of natural riding paths, the horse still needs the same loving care.

If you owned a horse you would see that the creature demands lots of time. One young 12-year-old, Judy Lewis, of Poundridge, N. Y., wakes up at dawn to feed her "Honeybun" and clean the stable. Judy doesn't disturb the family—she sets the alarm and gets up and does the job. When bad weather comes, Honeybun must be exercised even if she can't be ridden. And, of course, the horse must be exercised daily by Judy and her friends.

People who own dogs or cats and who get annoyed that they must open a can of food for the poor animal, would be overwhelmed if they saw Judy holding a bale of hay up to the stable loft for her horse's dinner.

How to Cut Grass

Lawn mowers throw grass clippings to the left. Thus, says Scotts Lawn Research, the proper way to mow is counter-clockwise. The clippings fall into the path of the "next time around", are chopped finer and fall among the grass roots.
