

Home Tour, Sponsored By Garden Club, Creates Much Interest

Miss Lois Harrold lighting the candles on her dinner table, which featured handmade white and silver arrangements she had made from a variety of shrubs, which had been especially prepared. This same fairy like type of decoration, each of which was placed on a white and iridescent base was used throughout the residence. All the rooms were lighted by candle light only, which brought out the striking features of this type of ornament.

Mrs. Joe Rose, standing by the mantel in the living room of her home which is furnished in early American pieces, and the decorations in harmony with that era. The white Christmas scene on the mantel complements the New England snow scene of the old Currier and Ives print directly above. The miniature Christmas tree bears an interesting collection of tiny gifts in keeping with the furnishings of the room. The figure of Washington, made in England dates back to the 18th century and is one of only six in this country.

Mrs. James M. Long presiding in the dining room of her residence. Here blue and white light blue candles on a base of green and white centered the table. Many interesting and unusual dried flowers and artistic snow scene in a forest.

Afternoon Woolens

Chalky green frock with vestee.

By VERA WINSTON

WONDERFUL wools play a starring role in the current sartorial scene, not only for smart daytime casuals but for charming afternoon numbers. A delicate pastel, chalky green, is the color chosen for this afternoon dress of sheer wool made with a molded bodice and a flaring skirt that can be worn with a stiffened petticoat if desired. Color is added by a little crossed-over vestee of green and pink plaided sheer that fills in the scooped-out neckline with its tiny standing collar.

Homemakers Club At Bethel Elects Officers For '52
