Lonely? Try Banquet For One

SUMMER meal for one . . . on paper plates. GLAMOROUS dessert . . . for private feast.

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
 Associated Press Food Editor
THE BABY'S still in the bottle stage and the older children are at camp? You're a mother who eats an uninteresting bite-and-nibble lunch all by yourself?
 Or maybe you're a career girl who lives alone and loves it—except for those nights you have a solo supper?

Then you've no idea what a wonderful thing a banquet for one can be. So comfortable to lean back and luxuriate in a delectable meal, to let your thoughts wander where they will, to plan and dream. Or to prop up that novel you've been dying to read and enjoy it, while you eat, without a single interruption.

Preparing an attractive meal for yourself doesn't have to mean more work—there are lots of interesting dishes that can be made quickly and easily in small quantity. Get yourself a supply of paper plates in a couple of sizes; when you're through, throw them airily away.
 We used to turn up our nose at paper plates—but that was before they went both functional and glamorous. Now they come in pretty shades, convenient sizes, and with plastic-coated surfaces that stand up well under any type of food—hot, cold, moist or dry. Nice to know, too, that they're sold in economy-size lots with anywhere from 30 to 100 plates in a cellophane-wrapped package. So hoarding some of your housekeeping money—give him chopped beef instead of T-bone steak—and treat yourself to this convenience. Or set your hair yourself one week, and splurge on these handy aids.

EVERY GOOD COOK needs rehearsals. What better time for a preview than when you're alone? Experiment with seasonings and garnishes with methods of preparation. When you cook the dish for a duet or quartette, you'll feel confident. Your reward? Rave notices.

Are there some foods you love that you never get enough of? Go on a binge—and widen your culinary knowledge. If you're crazy about cheese, for instance, have it as often as you like—but in different ways. Fold grated Cheddar cheese into your omelet; put a Roquefort spread on your hamburger; spoon a rarebit over a toasted English muffin. You've always wanted to try different kinds of Cheese? Camembert? Scandinavian? Gjetost? Italian, Bel Paese? Dutch-type Gouda? Who's to stop you? Wake up and taste!
 But one piece of stern advice: A six- or seven-inch skillet and a pin-size saucepan are indispensable for the sometime eat-alone. So quick to cook or heat food in, so easy to clean.

Enjoy your possessions. You've had your main course on a paper plate—this intriguing tomato dish, whose recipe we're giving you, with a crunchy salad of escarole, green pepper rings and fluted cucumber. Now bring out one of the silver dessert dishes Aunt Minnie gave you for a wedding present; put such a pretty easy-fix dessert, as this one that follows, on it. Then sit back and enjoy your gustatory adventure!

BAKED EGG IN TOMATO NEST

Ingredients: 1 large tomato, salt and pepper. 1 egg, 1 tablespoon grated Cheddar cheese.
Method: Scoop center out of tomato, leaving a wall about 1/2 inch thick; sprinkle inside cavity lightly with salt and pepper. Drop egg into cavity; sprinkle with salt and pepper. Top with grated cheese. Place in small greased baking dish; bake in moderate (350 F) oven 25 minutes or until leg is set. Makes 1 serving.
FRILLED MELON-RASPBERRY CUP
 Draw a zigzag pencil line around the center of a chilled cantaloupe. Now cut in half, following zigzag line so melon will be "frilled." Fill half with raspberries.

Rare Wine broached for King Edward VII when he visited Lisbon as the Prince of Wales. Only five bottles now remain. In 1905 the cork was found in of an 1815 port wine specially Portugal by Charles Bellows, a New York wine merchant. Bellows bottled it, numbered each bottle and distributed them to selected clients, including the late William Rockefeller. With Rockefeller's death, Francisco connoisseurs were to remain anonymous, the remaining bottles.
