Spring Arrival

By VERA WINSTON

JACKETS are longer or are cut to appear so, and the longer jacket look is very apparent in this early spring arrival done in gray men's wear woolen. The collar is larger than usual and stands away from the neckline, making a nice foil for the polka-dotted silk scarf. There is a leather belt above the pelium which is lined for stiffness and has tabbed pockets worked into the seaming. Horizontal pockets at the breast. The skirt is gored, and there is interesting detail at the jacket cuffs, as indeed, the whole suit is interesting and new.
