

Parents: Teach Your Sons, Daughters To Drive Safely

"Parents, would you knowingly place a keg of dynamite in the hands of your teen-age sons and daughters?"

The question was put to the parents of North Carolina this week by Joe W. Garrett, assistant motor vehicles commissioner.

"There isn't a parent in the state who wouldn't indignantly answer 'No!' to this question," Garrett said. "Yet many parents turn over to their children the keys to the family car, a weapon as potentially destructive as a quantity of high explosive, without giving a thought to the youngsters' fitness to drive."

Garrett made it clear he is not opposed to the driving of cars by teen-agers in general. What he deplores is the practice of allowing irresponsible or poorly instructed young people to drive as they choose, jeopardizing their own lives and the lives of others.

The youthful driver who is mature in his judgment, well instructed and driving a mechanically safe car is just as safe a driver as an older person similarly equipped, Garrett pointed out.

He emphasized that the responsibility for molding the child into such a driver rests largely with the parents.

"Safe driving education is compounded of one part instruction and one part example," Garrett said. "Parents should be conscious that they are educating for safe or unsafe driving every time they take the wheel in their children's presence."

PVT. GENE E. McCLURE, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. McClure, Route 1, Waynesville, is now taking basic training at Camp Gordon, Ga.

Garrett warned parents to satisfy themselves on the following points before allowing a teen-aged boy or girl to drive alone:

1. The young person should be mentally and emotionally mature enough to handle a car.
2. He should have received competent driver training and fully understand the traffic laws and regulations of the locality.
3. The car he drives (either his own or the family car) should be in perfect mechanical condition.

This includes classroom lectures in such subjects as military courtesy and first aid, and combat field problems involving the use of the M-1 rifle, which they will learn to fire on various ranges.

After eight weeks of training with the 101st Airborne Division, trainees are given about 14 days leave. They return to Fort Jackson for eight more weeks of infantry training, or may be assigned to one of the many Army schools.
