Clifford Green who was injured in 2 fall from a scaffold 38 months ago still remains unconscious in the Moore General Hospital.

Green was painting the ceiling of the Ninevah church when the board on which he was standing broke. It was not felt that he was severely injured at the time, as he even told co-workers he did not need a doctor. After a checkup he was sent to the Veterans Hospital, where he has been a patient for the past 38 months. Doctors say there is some hope that he might yet recover.

A county-wide voluntary inspection of cars and trucks will start next Tuesday at check lanes to be set up in Waynesville and Canton.

The check lane here will be in operation Tuesday and Wednesday on the lower part of Boundary St., a block east of the Waynesville Armory, according to Police Chief Orville Noland,

On Thursday the checking lane will be set up in Hazelwood and will return here Friday and Saturday. Hours will be from 8 a.m. until 6 p.m.

Manning the lanes will be a police or State Highway Patrol officer, 'an experienced mechanic from one of the area's garages, and volunteer workers-including students of the Waynesville High School driver training course. The inspections are entirely voluntary and are made free of charge.

Although present plans call for the inspection program to be carried on only thrugh next week, (See Car Inspection—Page 6)

This is the first time the organization has honored a person in such a manner.

Noland was voted the honor for his leadership in the Pigeon River project. The official award-will be given at a later date, the directors decided.

Noland has been chairman of a number of civic projects in the community, and was named man of the year several years ago by the Jaycees. The board of directors, after hearing reports of various committees Tuesday night, made plans for working with other agencies throughout the county on attendance for Haywood County Day at Lake Junaluska Ned Tucker, executive vice president of the organization, was nam-partment of the State Highway commission will soon start work on acquiring the right-of-way in Canton for the viaduct, the Mountaineer learned today from Commissioner Harry Buchanan. The bill authorizing the State to pay for all costs in connection with the construction of the via-duct was ratified this week.

The measure was introduced by Senator William 'Medford several weeks ago, upon the suggestion of the State Highway Commission, The bill set forth that there was no possible way to by-pass Canton with a highway, hence the provision was made whereby the Town of Canton would not be required to pay the third of right-of-way costs as provided by the regulations of the commission

Commissioner Buchanan said engineers would begin final work on the details of construction just as soon as rights-of-way were ac-

He would not make a statement as to how long he thought it would take to work out the right-of-way

There is set up for the project, $1,550,000.

Tentative plans are for the construction of an 800-foot viaduct, and a bridge across Pigeon River. parallel to the railroad. The route of the overhead road would start at the top of the hill near the Methodist church in East Canton, and follow the general route of the railroad to West Canton where it would connect with the new four lane highway.
