

Leatherwood Tells DAR Of Problems Facing Schools

Lawrence Leatherwood, county superintendent of schools, gave an address on "Federal Aid to Education" at a meeting of the Dorcas Bell Love Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, Friday afternoon in the home of Mrs. T. Lenoir Gwyn. The speaker was introduced by Miss Mary Reed Moore, who was in charge of the program.

In his opening remarks, Mr. Leatherwood said "The American School system is the world's greatest, most ambitious, and most successful form of education. It has justified the convictions of the founding fathers, who valued education as the cornerstone of democracy. However, they could hardly have imagined the situation of 1956 where the opportunity of getting an AB degree is easier for American youth than the chances of a grammar school education a century before."

"Yet," he continued, "this system is in trouble by its very magnitude. The excessive postwar birthrate, which jumped from nearly 3 million to over 4 million in 10 years, set a record which has steadily increased since."

In pointing out the importance of education, Mr. Leatherwood quoted Thomas Jefferson, who said, "If a nation expects to be ignorant and free, it expects what never was and never will be."

He spoke of land grants to colleges and traced the growth of education and its relation to population since the early days of this country. He told how the National Education Association has asked for Federal Aid as early as 1883 and discussed the Kelly bill which was introduced in Congress last July, explaining how it would affect Haywood county.

"The crisis in the United States school system cannot be cured without considerable effort, time, money, and imagination and ultimately the job of educating the American child cannot be done without the realization that learning as well as citizenship, imagination as well as adjustment, are equal parts of a school's mission."

Mrs. J. L. Elwood, regent, presided and yearly reports were made by the following chairmen: Mrs. J. W. Killian, Mrs. J. R. Boyd, Mrs. J. H. Howell, and Mrs. Hugh Leach.

Vanilla For Flavor

By ALICE DENHOFF

THERE'S fashion in foods, too. Flavors and items that are popular for years, suddenly are out of favor. But some things are perennial favorites, firmly ensconced in our kitchens for generations.

One of these is pure vanilla extract which has all the pungent, yet delicate, taste and aroma of the vanilla bean. Children love it; and it goes so well on its own or together with chocolate in delicious, healthful drinks.

With Molasses

To make a new drink, stir 1 tsp. mild-flavor molasses and ¼ tsp. pure vanilla extract into 1 c. cold milk. Serve in tall glass.

Or mash 1 fully ripe banana until creamy and smooth. Beat in 2 tsp. sugar, ¼ tsp. vanilla, a dash of salt and ¾ c. cold milk. Serve cold.

For a really unusual drink, prepare Spanish Chocolate Sauce, a wonderful blend of chocolate, vanilla and spices. The sauce is stirred into cold milk or used to top cake or ice cream.

Melt 3 squares unsweetened chocolate and 2 tsp. butter or margarine over hot water. Blend ¾ c. sugar, ½ tsp. ground cinnamon and ¼ tsp. ground nutmeg and mix with melted chocolate. Gradually stir in 1 c. strong coffee. Boil 5 min. over direct heat. Cool. Stir in 1 tsp. pure vanilla extract. Makes 1½ c.

Then there's the excellent idea of doing a caramel sauce and using that for delicious drinks.

Use Heavy Skillet

To prepare ¾ c. of sauce, brown 1 c. sugar in a heavy skillet, stirring constantly until all the sugar is brown and melted. Stir in ½ c. boiling water. At this point the sugar will lump, so cook until all lumps are dissolved, about 5 min. Remove from heat. Cool. Stir in 1 tsp. vanilla.

For a special small-fry treat that the grown-ups will demand, too, beat together 1 c. milk, 2 tsp. caramel sauce and 1 scoop vanilla ice cream. Serve in tall 8 oz. glasses.
