Wives Of Foreign Service Judicial Waiting

enroute to study at Warsaw Uni-

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON - Mrs. Monroe Hilliams Blake is drawing on her lived in Norway, Switzerland, Mexown wide evperience to help prepare wives for the new life they'll East Africa and England, where encounter in the countries to which her husband became ill of a heart and joined in watching the screen. their State Department husbands ailment from which he died last After the program was over he have been posted.

The handsome, New York - born former school teacher and the widow of a foreign service officer set up housekeeping in nine different countries in 16 years and traveled in at least 27 others. Now she's passing on her know-how in the department's foreign service orientation course for wives,

"Lots of wives are hesitant about pulling up roots and going to a strange far-away place," she told ne. "I try to tell them what an interesting and rewarding life it can be. I tell them my experiences the sad, the unusual, the poignant, as well as the many happy

But mostly she tells them about their responsibilities as representatives of their government abroad "all the time, every part of the day, in their home, at the market, on buses, public functions."

'In no other walk of life, is the wife so much a part of the team, and the phrase 'two for the price of one,' in describing the contribution of the foreign service personnel, is most apt," she said

The importance of knowing languages, the social customs and local protocol, as well as the business of calling, setting up housekeeping, entertaining and how to dress are all stressed in Mrs. Blakes' lectures and classes.

Mrs. Blake met her husband, then U. S. vice consul in Warsaw, Poland, on shipboard when she was

Look What Color Can Do For You

The colors you wear can actually make you look big or little, short

A bright, intense color, for example, creates an illusion of size. And for that reason, a large woman is wise to build her wardrobe around greys and neutral shades, according to Mary Em Lee, State College extension specialist in textiles and clothing.

Take a look around you and see how nature takes care of the relationship of size to color. The tiny butterfly is sparked with color. And even if you haven't seen any elephants lately, you know they don't wear red

Low-key colors are kind to bad figures just as they're good to overweight ones. They help to hideor at least to minimize-figure defeets. But the girl in the grey flannel suit needn't feel neglected and drab. She can wear vivid hats, scarves and accessories.

Tall women can make themselves appear even taller by choosing brightly colored hats, according to Miss Lee, Short girls, on the other hand, will look taller if they wear matching hats and dresses;

It's a good idea, however, to build your wardrobe around neutral tones regardless of your size or figure. And if you always want to look well, wear the fashionably popular colors only when they're becoming to you.
