Improper maintenance; (2) use of improper operating procedures, and (3) the use of old, obsolete, overloaded equipment.

Three common faults in the operation of coal furnaces, the engineer said, are (1) the use of too much air, (2) taking too many ashes out of the furnace when cleaning it out, and (3) hurrying stoking operations too much.

Mr. Kiewit said that inefficient burning not only produces more smoke, but is also considerably more costly to users of coal.

Despite the common belief, the engineer asserted, poor burning and soot occur in the winter when the weather is somewhat mild rather than when temperatures are hovering around zero. This is so, he explained, because hotter furnaces usually burn best.

Mr. Kiewit said that one difference he has noticed between heating equipment in the North and in the South is that there are more mechanical stoking units in use down here than up North.

He also pointed out that while many U. S. cities with a population of 35,000 or more have smoke-abatement programs, comparatively few the size of Waynesville have undertaken such a program.

enough vaccine on hand for 900 shots for all persons under 20 and for expectant mothers. Preference, however, is given to children who have not had any of the polio shots yet because even one shot affords some measure of protection.

Last fall the Health Department received enough vaccine for 1,400 shots, but orders were given locally that the shots not be given and the availability of the vaccine at the Health Center consequently was not publicized.

As a result, the vaccine was not used here and later was returned to the state for use in counties where demand for the vaccine was strong. Salk vaccine loses its potency after a certain time.

New orders have come from the federal government, issued through the State Board of Health, that the vaccine must be given free of charge at the health center, under contract with the U. S.

The motto of the state in the polio immunization program is "A Shot In Every Arm."

at State College, discussed the different cuts of meat and steps in the curing of ham.

He expressed a belief that Haywood County farmers can add to their income by the sale of smoke-cured country hams, especially during the tourist season.

At the meeting, Sam Ferguson of Fines Creek, Jule Boyd of Jonathan Creek and Jarvis Allison of Ratcliffe Cove were named as a county committee to work with other WNC committees in making plans for the annual feeder calf and yearling steer sales, held at Asheville each fall.

It was pointed out that more and more mountain farmers are taking advantage of these two sales each year, and are working hard to improve the quality of the livestock they sell.

stands a sentence, and very often before passing a sentence, will provide the defendant with some sound, and practical advice.

For instance, a young man charged with getting drunk, and then driving, was told:

"When you feel like drinking four to six cans of beer, just call a taxi to take you for a ride, and hand your wife $100—it will be cheaper than coming to court, and paying out more, and losing your driver's license."

Another young man got a year in November, 1954 for forging a $20 check. Tuesday he was on trial for forging a $45 check.

"On the same ratio, that means I should give you two years and three months," the defendant heard Judge Pless say.

"Everytime you drink, you get in trouble. Now you must learn not to take the first drink."

"Just why do you drink?"

"I don't know, your honor," the defendant said.

"People drink to get away from something."

"Now I am going to give you a year for forgery, and that means if you behave, you'll be off the roads in eight months, and all the liquor will be out of you. Then you must not violate any laws for five years, but if you do, then you go to the penitentiary for five to seven years. Now just never take the first drink, and you'll be able to make these terms."

When the grand jury had made their report, Judge Pless told them they could go down to the clerk's office and collect $4 per day, but ask "that they not spend so much money in one place."

Clerk of Court J. B. Siler was on his feet quickly for a conference with the Judge.

It turned out that the auditor's office was closed, and provision had not been made for paying the 15 jurors in cash that late in the day.

By that time over half of the grand jury members were on their way downstairs enroute to the clerk's office.

It was suggested the Clerk use some money collected from fines to pay the jurors and collect from the auditor Wednesday morning. In a jiffy a pay station was set up in the vault in the clerk's office, and everyone was happy.

Five Haywood Men Enlist In The Navy

Five men from Haywood County enlisted in the U. S. Navy during the month of January, and are now at U. S. Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill., where they will receive their recruit training.

The group includes: Jesse Edwards Hampton, Jr., of 125 Smathers St., Waynesville; Homer Reeves Clark, Troy Burton Sharpe, John Michael Spence, and Jerry Melvin Thompson all of Canton.

Upon completion of their recruit training all men will be given a 14-day leave to visit at home before reporting to their new duty stations.

Carolina Power Fights Hike In Freight Rates

Carolina Power & Light Company this week protested the proposed seven per cent hike in railroad freight rates. A plea to the Interstate Commerce Commission asserted the increase would have cost CP&L an extra $384,329 last year.

man for driving drunk. The man entered a plea of guilty, paid his fine, the costs, and handed Cpl. Smith his driver's license, and said: "Thank you, Corporal. When you are out my way, stop in and have a good dinner on me."

The man meant what he said—he realized the arrest probably saved him from a serious, if not fatal wreck.

A 17-year-old was charged with getting $8 cash from some stolen goods.

Judge Pless said, "you can't steal your way through life, but in order to make an impression on you, I am sending you to prison for eight months, hoping this will be a lesson that will keep you from getting into further trouble."

Two Negro men in their testimony about a fight, in which one got a 60-stitch slash on the back of the neck, told the court the argument started over a nickel.

A third man, who witnessed the whittling episode, said he saw a knife flash, and the next thing he knew his friend was hurt. He said he did not know enough about intoxicants to tell when someone had had a drink or two.
