final triumph for a story that has successfully stormed almost every entertainment outlet possible.

Written by Joseph Hayes, the screenplay of the nerve-jolting masterpiece, which stars Humphrey Bogart and Fredric March, is based on his own first novel and his Broadway stage adaptation.

The Broadway play, with Robert Montgomery directing, had a fantastic run. After an extraordinary reception by New York's toughest critics and sold-out performances for months, the stunningly suspenseful drama had been set for production in Paris, London, Rome, Vienna, Berlin, Stockholm and Bern.

"The Desperate Hours" is the story of the 48 hours of terror of a family whose home is invaded by a trio of brutal and murderous escaped convicts. Its violent and relentless tension and the brilliance of its performances have tabbed it as one of the greatest films ever produced.
