—2,500 and towns of more than 2,500. Civic-minded residents and clubs joined together under the general supervision of a local steering committee to carry through projects outlined at the beginning of last year.

Asheboro has maintained its dominant position for the past three years with a continuing five general-project program. This program consists of (1) community beautification, (2) industrial expansion, (3) educational improvements, (4) recreational improvements and (5) cultural development.

Among 36 individual undertakings under the general program last year, Asheboro secured two new industrial plants, built a new golf course, converted an abandoned airport into industrial sites complete with water main and railroad siding, and organized a high school symphony orchestra.

Neighboring Ramseur completed a 27-point program under the project headings of (1) general development, (2) school improvements, (3) general beautification (4) planned recreation and (5) development of cultural information and religious activities.

Included in Ramseur's projects were setting up a youth center, a housing project for out-of-town workers, a revised zoning ordinance, street widening and off-street parking. To promote beautification, house-of-the-month awards were presented home owners to encourage landscaping and repairs.

Coastal Swansboro, although its efforts were nearly washed into the Atlantic by three hurricanes in the fall, bounced back to complete 32 projects under the categories of (1) recreation improvements, (2) civic and commercial improvements, (3) residential improvements, (4) improved educational facilities and (5) improved municipal facilities.

As a result, the town now has a new fire station, a new bank and an active junior league baseball team.

Even before judging was completed communities had set in motion activity for the 1956 Finner Carolina contest, fifth of the annual series. Rules for this year's contest have been changed to reward effort put into individual projects. Prizes will be awarded for outstanding project accomplishments as well as general community achievements.

CP&L sponsors the contest in an effort to strengthen community spirit and pride and make the two Carolinas more attractive to industries seeking new plant locations.

provide as much immunity as possible before the start of the so-called "polio season" in June. Dr. Matthews said that the Haywood County Medical Society has recommended that polio shots be given under a family doctor's supervision in his office where records will remain readily available for possible diagnostic reference.

(Records on students immunized at school clinics are kept at the Health Center.)

Dr. Matthews said that shots to be given at school clinics in May will be under the supervision of county doctors, and that at least one doctor will be present and active at each school.

The doctor called the Salk vaccine "the safest I have seen" and said that it now has been approved by the American Medical Association, the U. S. Public Health Service, and the American Pediatric Society.

He said that Haywood County doctors have demonstrated their faith in the Salk vaccine by having all their own children immunized.

that particular time, and to have a part in the phenomenal expansion of the college. He said further that it has always been his particular desire to encourage the spiritual, social and academic growth of the student body, for if this phase is neglected, then the physical expansion cannot be utilized to its fullest potential.

Phillip Woolcott, president of the Bank of Asheville and chairman of the Board of Trustees of WCC, said that Dean W. E. Bird has been named by the Executive Committee to fill the vacancy created by President Reid's resignation. Dean Bird has served the college for thirty-six years as dean and as Professor of English and head of the English Department. Prior to President Reid's coming to WCC, Dean Bird had served as Acting President for two years, and the Executive Committee noted that he is particularly well qualified by experience and identification with the college, to serve as president.

In a further action, the Executive named Professor William B. Harrill to serve as Acting Dean of the college. Professor Harrill is a member of the staff of the Education Department, and Director of Public Relations for the College.

Members of the Executive Committee present for the meeting Wednesday were Woolcott, chairman; J. Ramsey Buchanan of Sylva, vice chairman; and E. J. Whitmire of Franklin.

Woolcott voiced the committee's sentiments when he said, "We regret very much to lose Mr. Reid as president of Western Carolina College. However, he is entering a position where he can continue to render valuable service to the educational system of the state, and is being replaced by a man whom we all know and believe in."
