Nagy Advises Four-Step Delivery

This is the third of five stories on BETTER BOWLING written especially for AP Newsfeatures by Steve Nagy, Bowler of the year. Five-step deliveries (I use five), but the four-step is probably easiest for beginners or novices. Notice that the slide increases the fourth step's length, and the first is shortened for a smooth starting motion. Here's the sequence of the standard four-step delivery. Take a short step forward with the right foot and push the ball forward and down in a smooth motion. The second step is slightly longer and the ball swings back, passing your right leg. The ball reaches the top of the backswing (not more than shoulder high) on the third step and your left arm extends for balance. The last step, on the left foot, brings you up near the foul line in a smooth slide. At the same time, the ball swings forward and is released as you end your slide.

FOUR STEP delivery, with empty shoes to show the length of each step, is demonstrated by star bowler Steve Nagy.

So This Is New York

By NORTH CALLAHAN

Somewhat south of here is a pleasant man, past the middle age of life, of medium build, with a nice smile, horn-rim glasses over which he often looks pointedly at you, and with a balding head that recedes into a thin back-stretch of hair. He seems to be in good health, sees many people in his work every day—and definitely will run again. But although he could pass for a twin, his name is not Eisenhower—but Lawrence A. Gerber, and he is a veteran dining car steward on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

After being on Broadway for a year, the show, "Plain and Fancy" is taking to the road and many of you may see it in other cities. Laid in the picturesque Amish country of Pennsylvania, the play has attracted much attention here with its cast costumed in the broad black hats, the buttonless clothes

Ducks make history, I learned, on dropping into the exhibit of the New York Historical Society, and being informed that this state produces more than half the nation's ducks. Other interesting facts: in the late 18th century, millions of acres of land around here were sold for 12 cents an acre; a Troy, N. Y. house wife in 1820 got tired of washing a shirt every day for her fastidious blacksmith-husband, so she invented the separate collar, from which sprang the collar-making industry. Ambling around the festive-looking outlay, I came upon the first typewriter, made in 1873; first washing machine, juke box, and a big car trumpet which was said to be the earliest hearing aid. Then to a repast of home-grown meats and vegetables, topped off by delicious apple pie—and the present seemed as good if not better than the past.

Ladies, you may wear a size 7 shoe here but in Scandinavia it's size 40. I was just told by Sally Ann Simpson who has travelled all over that country for the Scandinavian Airlines System and has written a booklet about her experiences there. Sally Ann, who now appears on television, said that when a man travels abroad, he usually is on business and knows just where he is going and what he is going to do, but that a woman visitor is often at a loss as to what to do, where to shop, etc. So Sally has made a list of suggestions along this line, including comparisons with similar American items.

Gotham Gatherings sign in a midtown store: "Accuracy is our watchword—we never make a mistake." Vincent Lopez who with his orchestra was booked into a local hotel for three weeks, has just finished his 15th year there sign on a local excursion boat: "The chairs in this cabin are for the ladies. Gentlemen are requested not to make use of them until the ladies are seated." New Yorkers are griping about the crackdown on traffic violations by city officials, but all have to admit that the traffic-death rate is down about 50 per cent from last year. The Empire State Building is a show-off. It will soon have beacon lights that can be seen for 40 miles on the ground and 300 miles in the air.

Dartmouth lost three indoor track meets in 1955 by identical scores, 64½-44½.

Cutting Basketball Nets Condemned By NCHSAA

C. C. Poindexter, coach and principal at Bethel High School and a member of the board of control of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association, received this letter recently from L. J. Perry, executive secretary of the NCHSAA: "Within the past few years there has sprung up in the high schools of North Carolina the practice of cutting down the nets after a team has won a basketball tournament. This year the practice has gone so far that, in several instances, the nets have been cut down after a team won a regular season's game. Our thinking is that this practice has no place in our educational activities. We claim that we would like to teach the winners to be modest in victory. This practice is just the opposite; it is a demonstration of gloating in victory. This practice also has a tendency to encourage riotous action and violence. The executive committee has ruled: "(1). That all tournament managers be advised to inform the teams participating in any sectional or state tournament that, after a tournament is over, the nets will be taken down and presented formally to the winning team. By doing this, we may make a sporting event out of this procedure and, too, the winning team may have the nets intact which they can put in their display case, instead of having scraps of the net in the hands of various students, or spectators, who will, doubtless, in many instances, throw the scraps away when they have left the gymnasium. "(2). It shall be considered a breach of the sportsmanship code, for any coach or player to participate in, or aid and abet in, a net-cutting activity."
