NEW BUSINESSMAN in Waynesville is Tommy Norris, who has opened his own television and radio repair shop at his home on Hazel St. Tommy, a student for the past year and a half in the adult course in electronics at Waynesville High, here is holding an overload testing unit which he has invented and hopes to patent. Tommy Norris Opens TV-Radio Repair Shop

Tommy Norris of Waynesville, a student in the adult electronics course at WTHS for the past year and a half, has opened his own television and radio repair shop at his home on Hazel St., near the intersection of Walnut St., across from the Haywood Motor Inn.

Tommy, a familiar figure around town in his little blue car, has acquired a stock of equipment and tools worth $1,000, a complete library of TV and radio repair manuals valued at $500, and $500 worth of spare parts.

Tommy explained that his manuals deal with every television and radio set manufactured since 1946, eliminating the "trial and error" type of servicing.

Working with Tommy will be Jim Sisk, also an adult student in the WTHS electronics course, who will make house calls and do minor repairs in home, and Phil Bright, who will help in the shop on Hazel St.

Tommy disclosed that he has been interested in radio and television since 1947 and has been studying the subject constantly since then.

Since enrolling in Y. F. Burgess' electronics class at Waynesville High, Tommy has built his own television set and also has invented an overload tester, which permits testing of television and radio chassis without removing it from the cabinet, thus saving valuable time to repairmen. The device can be utilized to make voltage, current, and resistance tests and is especially useful when television or radio tubes burn out frequently. Tommy is now seeking to patent his new overload tester.

In connection with his electronics work, Tommy won a prize in the N. C. State Fair last fall with his "phantom record player."

Tommy has been paralyzed from the waist down ever since he was injured while diving at Lake Junaluska in 1945.

Being about 80% of our servicing in the living room, we at NELSON'S TV SERVICE see a lot of different arrangements of lamps and lights. A great deal of it is poor. Many builders of newly constructed homes are making more scientific plans for television in living rooms, however, most of the older homes can make better viewing positions for televisions.

A simple test is the mirror check. Hold a hand mirror in front of your TV screen and if any light reflections strike it from lamps or windows, then your setting is wrong. Reflections in the screen will cause undue eye strain.

Your television room should be well lighted, too, and have an even illumination; no sharp contrasts. It is good to have the wall behind your set light but not brighter than the screen. Ceiling lights should not be used unless they're of the flush type.

Your television viewing should be tried. And if any difficulties arise that makes the screen unsteady, or give you anything but clear and sharp pictures, phone GL 6-8881 and let us check it for you. We'll guarantee your satisfaction, and assist you in relocating your set for the best picture.
