

Senator Ervin Opposed To Some Farm Bill Proposals

WASHINGTON—Last week the Senate completed action on the farm bill and sent it to conference with the House to iron out differences. The bill is a composite of many things. I am opposed to several of them. Nevertheless, it represents the best approach that could be had at this time. I voted for it on final passage.

Other Things

While debate on the farm bill occupied most of the attention of the country insofar as Senate business was concerned, I do want to point out that other bills of lesser importance were acted upon. I am a member of the Legislative Review Committee. Before this group come all so-called calendar bills, awaiting the nod to be brought to the floor. Last Monday we had a calendar call and were able to get 162 bills to the floor and passed within a period of two hours. This accomplishment was made possible by the great degree of cooperation from both Democrats and Republicans who helped to expedite these minor bills.

Reaction

I have been asked several times about the reaction to the so-called Southern manifesto. My mail has shown an overwhelming endorsement of it. Only six people have written to the contrary.

Foreign Aid

The President's request for nearly $5 billion in foreign aid reached the Congress last week. It struck a stone wall due to some of its far-reaching aspects, namely long-range economic obligations. I do not subscribe to the theory that increase economic expenditures can produce peace and security. I do favor military assistance to those countries that are honestly building their defense against communism, and I endorse limited amounts for technical assistance. But heavily increased spending as requested by the President's message will find objection in Congress. The administration will have to make a very good case or it will fail in its request.

The Fallen Despot

Democracy certainly has a right to chuckle over the plight of the fallen despot, the late Joseph Stalin. It must be a ridiculous matter for the Russians to have to rewrite history every time dictators change. This should be a lesson to us and the world to not put any great trust in the performance of communists, whether they are the new or old models, smiling or tense.

Visitors

The arrival of the first school groups on their visits to Washington last week coincided with the coming of Spring. But Spring in the Capitol came on the heels of the winter's worst snow storm. After the bleak days of winter, it is refreshing to look upon the brightness and enthusiasm of youth. All of us were glad to see the annual school treks commence.

Waynesville Wins Parliamentary Procedure Contest

A Waynesville High team won an FFA Parliamentary procedure Tuesday held in the Agriculture Department of WTHS.

In winning first place, they will represent the Balsam FFA Federation which includes schools in Haywood and Jackson counties in the district contest in Asheville May 11 and 12.

The Waynesville High School FFA team included Tom Garrett, president; Joe Hannah, vice president; Verlin Edwards, secretary; Ralph Messer, treasurer; Jackie Felmet, reporter and Max Jenkins, sentinel.

Second place winner was the Bethel team and third place went to Glensville of Jackson County.

E. Waynesville Church To Have Revival

A series of revival services will be held at the East Waynesville Baptist Church beginning Sunday night and continuing throughout the week.

Rev. M. H. Raby, pastor of the Antioch Baptist Church, will bring the message each evening at 7:30 o'clock. Special music will be featured throughout the meeting.

The pastor, the Rev. Hobert Shope, Jr., invites the public to attend these services.

Six Scholarships Will Be Given By Dairy Group

To continue to attract young men of high caliber to the dairy manufacturing industry, the North Carolina Dairy Products Association is offering again scholarships for 1956-57 school year at North Carolina State College.

The 1956-57 program includes six scholarships in dairy manufacturing which provide $500 each for two freshmen, $300 each for two sophomores, and $200 each for two juniors. It was announced today by J. Lloyd Langdon, executive vice president of the association.

The scholarships are designed to encourage superior and qualified high school graduates from all areas of the state to select the State College curriculum in dairy manufacturing and to serve as an incentive for second and third year students already enrolled in the course.
