Civil Air Patrol Playing Important Role In National Program, Says Maj. Sellers

"The Civil Air Patrol is playing a big part in our national aviation program," Major J. M. Sellers, Asheville, told Rotarians here Friday.

The visiting executive officer of Group Four of the CAP, explained the founding of the organization in the early days of World War II, and the important role the CAP now plays in the national program. The program is two-fold, the speaker explained; search and rescue, and training of cadets, who are between 14 and 18 years of age, and both boys and girls.

All officers of the CAP are trained by the Air Force, and are trained in every phase of aviation, Major Sellers explained.

"It is not necessary to fly in order to be a member of CAP," the executive officer explained. "There are from 10 to 20 working personnel on the ground for every flyer," he continued.

The cadets are taken on orientation flights, but are not given any training as flyers, as that is left to special instructors. The cadets are shown the principal of flight, and all other phases of aviation.

Cadets who are CAP cadets can go directly into the Air Force as first class airman, at a higher rate of pay than those without the cadet training.

Since there are so many cadets now in CAP, the screening of those seeking admission has been stepped up, Major Sellers said.

Members of CAP receive no pay, except when on actual rescue or search mission, and during such training courses as was staged about a week ago. The members pay for their uniforms, and are called on for any type of emergency.

Major Sellers discussed the crash of one of the search planes which hit a mountainside near Soco a week ago. "An average of one plane is lost in three search missions," he explained. About 600 persons and 60 to 70 aircraft took part in the recent search program in this area.

TV
By Floyd Nelson

Networks have been working on surveys to find out who controls the television dial in the family. Naturally, this will give them a lot of insight about slanting their commercials for the best results. It seems that they can't decide if it's the kids or Mom, but they're sure that Dad doesn't have much to say about it.

At NELSON'S TELEVISION SERVICE we've noticed that any late afternoon calls for TV servicing always have the disappointed kids waiting around for their favorite cowboy show, and almost always if a parent will want a rush job, they will mention that the kids don't want to miss their programs. Adults don't make to much ado about missing television unless there is a special program like a Presidential speech or a Championship fight. We'd pick the kids for controlling the television dial.

And when you pick a number like GL 6-6281 on your telephone call about TV service, you will find a prompt, progressive service organization that does a job with accurate electronic instruments. And we'll please the kids, too with good, fast service.

ARTHUR PAUL EVANS

VOTE FOR WHITFIELD FOR LT. GOVERNOR

I regret that it has not been possible to visit everyone personally and tell each citizen individually how I stand on the important problems facing the state.

Of course, the most important issue is integration in the public schools. As I stated when I announced my candidacy on March 12th, I am opposed to integration in our public schools. I believe in protecting racial integrity. We have the resources to educate children of all races under any system we deem best for the welfare of the state.

Restoring the small farmer to his former position in our agriculture should have our immediate attention. Unless some action is taken now, the little farmer is on his way out.

I am for 90% of parity for basic agricultural crops.

I am against any further tax on tobacco.

Clean water is one of the great needs of this state. I have fought for that since 1947. We are making progress, and will within the next few years, have our streams in a healthier condition.

Please remember that in all my legislative career I have never dodged an issue.

I served as Pender County Representative in the General Assembly four terms (1945-1951). State Senator one term (1953).

Chairman State Stream Sanitation Committee.

Member North Carolina Farm Bureau.

President Forest Farmers Association.

Vice Chairman National Fruit and Vegetable Committee of the American Farm Bureau.

I am a member of the Baptist Church and teacher of the Men's Bible Class.

If elected Lieutenant Governor of this State, the welfare of all the people will be my first concern. Vote for the man who never dodges an issue.
