Martin Will Display New Electronic Range In June

At a press preview in New York, national food editors and home economists watched the revolutionary electronic range accomplish these cooking wonders:

- Broil bacon on a paper plate in two minutes. Bake a potato in five minutes. Cook a 5 pound beef roast in 30 minutes. Heat a jar of baby food in 45 seconds. Bake a 2-layer cake in six minutes in a cold oven.

Heat coffee directly in the cup, the saucer remaining cool.

The range itself is in the form of a compact, lustrous oven that can be installed as a built-in unit or stacked on cabinets as a modular unit. Browning of meats and casseroles, long the question mark of electronic cooking, is achieved by a super-speed coil element in the top of the oven. Adjustable racks and a timer control the browning unit. A card file of over 400 detailed recipes is built into the bottom of the range for easy reference in cooking.

Guests at the first viewing of the range were told that the unit operates on microwaves, the same type of energy which transmits the ultra
