CONDITIONAL SALES

What is a conditional sales contract?

It is a type of contract used by many persons in buying items of personal property on the installment plan. It enables the buyer to get immediate possession of the property on his promise that he will pay the full purchase price later in certain specified installments. Although the buyer acquires possession, the seller retains the title or ownership of the property until the last payment is made.

Merchants frequently attract the attention of customers by advertising the conditional sales contract security device as the "easy payment plan," "budget plan," "deferred payment plan," or "dignified credit plan."

If the conditional buyer misses one of his payments, may the seller take the property back?

Yes. If the conditional buyer fails to make any payment when it is due, the seller can repossess or take back the property.

If the seller repossesses or takes back the property he can still sue the buyer for the amount of the sales price not yet paid, less any amount he gets from a resale of the property.

Is a conditional sales contract valid oral?

A conditional sales contract is valid, as between the conditional seller and the conditional buyer, without a writing. But in order to be valid against the creditors of, and purchasers for a valuable consideration from, the conditional buyer it must be in writing and registered in the courthouse.

Many conditional sellers do not make a general practice of registering all written conditional sales contracts. They frequently register only contracts involving a large sum of money or where, in their opinion, there is considerable financial risk.

Where must be the conditional sales contract be registered?

If the conditional buyer is an individual who resides in North Carolina, the contract must be registered in the office of the register of deeds of the county where the conditional buyer resides at the time the instrument is executed.

Where a conditional sales contract has been registered in the proper county, a subsequent change of residence of the buyer or a subsequent removal of the property to another county of North Carolina does not affect the lien. The law does not require a second registration in this State in either of these events.

A resident of North Carolina buys an automobile from the Jones Motor Company. The conditional sales contract is not registered. The conditional buyer sells the automobile to Tom Smith who has actual knowledge of the fact that the automobile was acquired from the Jones Motor Company under

Northwest Frontier Is Locale Of New Strand Film

A motion picture of "bold adventure and panoramic excitement," according to Hollywood report, Columbia Pictures' "The Last Frontier" opens Sunday at the Strand Theatre. The film stars Victor Mature, Guy Madison and Robert Preston, co-stars James Whitmore and Anne Bancroft and features Russel Collins. The picture is in CinemaScope and Technicolor.

"The Last Frontier" is a story of the American wilderness and of the men and women who wrested a part of this continent from the Sioux nation. It tells of one of the last great battles for the American northwest and of an Army scout who opposes his ruthlessly ambitious commander when the latter imperils his outpost and the lives of his men to satisfy his own obsession.

Woman Penalized For Employment Violation

A Crabtree woman has been fined $20 by Justice of the Peace J. J. Ferguson and declared ineligible for a year for unemployment compensation for violation of the North Carolina Employment Security law.

Ora Lee Sheehan of Route 1, Clyde, was found guilty on May 25 of failure to report earnings while receiving unemployment insurance. Judgment was $20 fine and court costs of $4.75, with the fine suspended on condition that she refund the Commission $14 in tent.

benefits which she had received to which she was not entitled.

Since the law provides that an individual found guilty of fraudulent reporting shall be declared ineligible for a one-year period from the date of the offense, the claimant was deprived of insurance benefits from April 16, 1956, to April 15, 1957.
