This is a very busy season for farmers in this section who are trying to get tobacco, work the corn crop, and also prepare onions for the market. Hay is ready for cutting, and some has already been cut and baled.

It seems there isn't much time right now for fishing, but maybe there will be later in the summer when farm work is not quite so pressing.

Glenn McCracken made a business trip to South Carolina last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Daniel returned to Bristol, Va. after spending the night with Mrs. Daniel's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Ferguson.

Mr. Daniel will resume his studies at Duke this summer, while Mrs. Daniel will serve as an instructor at Camp Junaluska for girls.

Miss Joan Ferguson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ferguson, completed her training at Blanton's Business College last week. She is now employed at the Blitmore dairy bar near Lake Junaluska.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ferguson visited Mrs. Ferguson's sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Swanger, at Brevard last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Kirkpatrick spent Sunday with their daughter, Mrs. Susie Reece and family.

Patients at Haywood County Hospital from Fines Creek are Glenn Noland, Mrs. T. D. Brummitt, and Frank Green.

ONLY COLOR FILM can really capture the beauty of roses in bloom in the Waynesville area, such as these at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Worthington on Grimball Drive, Hazelwood. Most of the red roses in this scene blend in with the surrounding foliage in a black and white picture. A grower of roses for years, Mrs. Worthington now also raises orchids at her home.

Rotarians Hear F. B. I. Agent Describe Bureau

Rotarians here Friday heard Robert S. Moore, special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, describe some of the work of the agency, and the importance of cooperation of citizens with the bureau.

Agent Moore, of the Asheville office, described the bureau as the general investigating agent of the government. Tax matters are left to the treasury department for investigation, he pointed out.

The F. B. I. concerns itself mainly with civil matters and criminal matters, and since 1939 have had charge of internal security of the nation.

Agent Moore described in detail what happened about a year ago at Hot Springs, in Madison county, when a bank there was robbed of approximately $10,000.

An observant citizen of the town, he said, reported that a former resident had been seen in town the day and night before the robbery, and shortly after the robbery. The suspicion pointed to the man, and the F. B. I. checked with his Ohio address for the names and pictures of his associates. The cashier and a customer in the bank quickly identified two of the associates as the men who staged the robbery.

Later they were arrested, convicted and sentenced to 25 years. The former citizen was convicted as being an accomplice to the robbery, although he did not actually participate.

Agent Moore told of the identification division of F. B. I. which has on file some 139 million fingerprints. Some known criminals have as many as 20 sets in the files, the agent said.

The F. B. I. laboratory handles thousands of matters of evidence annually, many for police and other officers, he said. In such cases, the bureau even provides an expert to testify in court.

Agent Moore described a case in Miami, where five members of a family had been murdered. Police had gone their limit in trying to pick up enough clues to travel on, when a man from Ohio was arrested in Jacksonville, and had with him two pistols. A check of the guns in the F. B. I. laboratory in Washington revealed that both weapons had been used in killing the family of five. The murderer was convicted and electrocuted.

The laboratory is often the means of solving major crimes, and at this point, Agent Moore said that crime had been steadily on the increase since 1942.

"The increase is serious, and startling as it may seem, 42 percent is being committed by those 18 years of age and younger. I am glad to hear of your recreation program here, and it should be an important factor in helping to reduce juvenile delinquency in

Suggestions For Bread Storage Given By Agent

By RUTH CURRENT
State Home Demonstration Agent

BREAD STORAGE—Research fact finders say wrapped bread or packaged rolls should be left in original wrappers when placed in storage units. Bread or rolls which may be purchased unwrapped, can be kept satisfactorily if wrapped in moisture-vapor proof papers or, if placed in a moisture-resistant bag before storing. Exceptions are the hard- or crisp-crust breads and rolls. These products are best when eaten fresh.

REFRIGERATOR FOR BREAD—Bread may be stored in the refrigerator to retard mold growth, but the longer the refrigeration period, the firmer bread becomes. Refrigeration temperatures step up staling. Use of wrappers or special containers does not offset the effect of cool temperatures on bread freshness.

FREEZER STORAGE FOR BREAD—Bread should be stored in frozen food cabinets at zero degree, or lower. These temperatures keep the flavor, freshness, original moisture and aroma of bread intact if it is wrapped securely in moisture-vapor proof material beforehand. Bread, thawed or fresh, stales at the same rate under like storage conditions. Fresh hard- or crisp-crust breads or rolls should be wrapped loosely in kraft paper. To use, unwrap and thaw bread at room temperature. Heat, uncovered, in a hot oven for about five minutes and serve immediately. Freezing stale or partially stale bread will not restore its freshness.

CLEAN, DRY CONTAINERS FOR BREAD—Clean, dry containers are an unquestionable necessity for giving bread the care that it deserves. All storage containers should be thoroughly washed, weekly. Baking soda dissolved in warm water is the preferred agent for odorless cleaning. The unit should be dried well, including all joints and it should be free of crumbs. Any remaining moisture or crumbs may favor mold growth.

New Road Map Just Issued By State Commission

From Murphy to Manteo (or Postell to Salvo, if you prefer) North Carolina stretches nearly four feet across the 1956 Official Highway Map just issued by the State Highway and Public Works Commission. The map is literally four feet wide and a foot and a half deep, accordingly-pleated to fold into approximately four by nine inches.

The reverse of the map contains 16 four-color pictures, including a scene at Cherokee, a view of Bridal Veil Falls, rhododendron and dogwood, as well as scenes of central and coastal Carolina. The State seal, a cardinal and a dogwood branch complete the layout.

The map itself shows U. S. highways in red and state roads in black. The mountains are conspicuous in green, with lakes and rivers shown in blue. A chart of mileages between various towns includes Waynesville and Canton.

The map is complete in every respect except one—nobody has invented a way of refolding it quickly into its original neat form.
