Smokies Road Project Stalled In Tennessee

WASHINGTON — The National Park Service said this week it has given up hope of getting rights-of-way in time to start a scheduled million dollar project by June 30 on the Pigeon Forge-Gatlinburg approach road in Tennessee.

A spokesman explained that about a million dollars had been allocated for the project this fiscal year but it will be used for something else. He added that a $600,000 allocation is proposed for the road in the budget for the year starting July 1.

The road would be a connecting link between the proposed Foothills Parkway and the entrance to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park at Gatlinburg.

"We had a little over a million dollars in the 1956 fiscal year budget for a section of the road," the spokesman said.

"Here it is close to the end of the fiscal year and we have no rights-of-way and the state says it doesn't know when it will be ready with them."

"Our 1957 fiscal year budget includes $600,000 which was planned for use following up the million.
