Modern Sound Equipment Added To Lake Auditorium

A $2,000 DuKane low-level sound system, employing the latest type "Lowell chandler baffles," has been installed in George Stuart Auditorium. Formerly all sections of the audience have been unable to hear proceedings on the stage clearly because of problems of feed-back in the old sound system among other things. The new system remedies those problems.

The system has ten microphone units with facilities for mixing any four of the 10 in a special pre-amplifier and driver unit. This low-level system contains 28 speakers and is the largest of its type in operation in Western North Carolina. Another feature of the system is four boom microphones suspended strategically throughout the seating area of the auditorium enabling persons seated in the audience to participate in panel discussions, question and answer sessions, and other proceedings. The system also accommodates special hearing aid devices for more than thirty people.

A representative of Southern School Service, Inc., of Canton, who installed the system, said that "the Stuart Auditorium represented one of the most difficult sound engineering jobs in this area, due to the unique structure of the building — no ceiling, cement floors, and size."

"The speakers are chandler type and are spaced approximately twenty-five feet apart throughout the seating area of the auditorium. Thus enabling the entire audience to hear distinctly and clearly."

The latest television and radio broadcast type microphones were
