

400 WNC Methodist Youth Open Junaluska Workshop

Approximately 400 young people from 18 to 23 years of age from the Western North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Church opened a week-long senior Assembly at Lake Junaluska.

This is the first senior workshop program for young people to be held here.

The purpose of the workshops is to give youth vital worship experiences, personal enrichment, and to give special training to youth and their adult leaders in planning and carrying out the Methodist Youth Fellowship program.

The inspirational speaker for the program is the Rev. Phil Shore, Jr., of Hendersonville. He will speak at various times throughout the week on topics similar to the theme of the conference "Workers with God through the Methodist Youth Fellowship."

There will be a similar assembly for young people from 15 to 18 years of age June 24-30.

Miss Anne Lise Rossberg of Fredrikstad, Norway, a student at Wesleyan College in Macon, Ga., will work in both assemblies as a representative of the Methodist Board of Education.

Dean and head counselor for the assembly this week will be Rev. and Mrs. Worth Sweet of Salisbury. Laney Funderburke of Belmont will preside over the workshop assembly. Betty Brinkley of Lexington is secretary. Mary Ellen Harrell of Salisbury, director of youth work for the WNC Conference for the Methodist Board of Education, will also be with the assembly.

Watch That Waistline On Your Poultry

Unbelievable as it may sound, chickens have to watch that waistline, too, or rather, the poultryman must watch it for them.

R. S. Dearstyne, State College poultry scientist, says that there is a great variation among chickens individual ability to utilize feed. And if they can't use all the fat they take in, the fat goes around the middle just as it does on humans.

Dearstyne says that overly-fat birds tend to become sluggish; egg production is often retarded, and such birds are believed to develop the condition of prolapse—commonly known as a "blowout". If a flock as a whole becomes too fat, the fault usually lies in the diet and a careful check should be made on this.

The consumption of mash and grain by layers on a mash-grain diet should be about equal parts of mash to grain. If the chickens become too fat, the condition can be corrected by reducing the amount of grain fed.

However, Dearstyne advises not to cut their grain abruptly, but to do it gradually over the course of several days. Probably one of these days some bright guy will come up with a commercial reducing aid for that kind of chicken.

So This Is New York

By NORTH CALLAHAN

This is now officially the world's largest city. In the past, as you know, London has been spoken of along with other large population centers as being as large or larger than New York. But some figures just released by the United Nations give the following information in population terms of the metropolitan areas of which each city is the hub: New York, 12,300,000; London, 8,300,000; Tokyo, 6,300,000; Shanghai, 6,200,000 and Paris, 4,800,000. Of course one has to remember that there is no recent such information about cities behind the Iron Curtain.

It was like being at home back in my father's country store at Fork Creek, Tennessee. The current exhibit of the New York Historical Society on old-time foods and medicines, that is. In showing in an interesting and entertaining manner the developments along these lines since the passage of national laws for their improvement, 50 years ago, the organization has almost outdone itself. Along its staid walls are soda crackers served from the old-type barrel; shiny apples, pink pills for pale people, posters and labels and even a mellow old pot-bellied stove around which the "customers" sat and swapped yarns and gossip. And how the ladies must have made up in those days, judging from their

Ran across a cab driver who evidently has little respect for the local weather man. Turning to me—a captive audience in the back seat—and speaking out of the corner of his mouth, as they usually do, he whined, "Wonder why day can't hit it right, some of de time? Why dis here wedder man here, jist let him mention snow flurries, and what happens? We have de blizzard of de year! Good ting he's not giving out de train schedules—nobody would make their rattlers. And annuder ting," he shook his head as he just missed hitting a pedestrian who cut across a red light, "I'd sure hate to go to de race track with this here wedder man here. We'd lose on every horse he picked!"

Flow Of Honey Starts At Blooming Of Tulip Poplar

The beekeeper is often asked: "When does the honey flow start?" Or "When is the right time to put on supers?"

W. A. Stephen, State College extension beekeeper, says that by keeping records during the last few years, he has found that the honey flow coincides with the blooming of the tulip tree or tulip poplar (a woodsman may call it yellow poplar).

Stephen says that one of these trees in the open may have thousands of blossoms, each of which secretes enough nectar to keep several bees busy lapping it up. Secretion takes place in the early stages of bloom and often bees may be seen burrowing down into a bloom about the time it is beginning to open.

So, Stephen advises that when the tulip trees are buzzing with bees searching for nectar, it's time to bring on the super.

Exchange Students

NEW YORK (AP)—Every year some 50,000 persons are on exchange between United States and foreign colleges, universities and research organizations.

Last year, says the Institute of International Education, about three fourths of these were foreigners coming to the United States.

Officials of the Institute, founded in 1919, believe that persons with international training are of such value to business, government and professional groups that it has established a Central Index of Educational Exchanges covering 210,000 persons who have had contact with it in the past 36 years. "Information on an estimated 25,000 to 30,000 new exchanges will be added annually," says Kenneth Holland, president of the Institute.

Cents And Nonsense

WHEELING, W. Va. (AP)—Herman Levite probably is in full agreement that a recommended educational training program for city police here should begin immediately.

Levite put a dime in a "nickels only" meter while parking his car, but realized his mistake immediately and left an explanatory note under his windshield.

When he returned, Levite found a familiar blue parking ticket beside his note. A policeman had written: "knickles only, sir."

WSCS, Guild Will Open Lake Conference Tuesday

The Woman's Society of Christian Service and Wesleyan Service Guild of the Southeastern Jurisdiction of the Methodist Church, nine Southeastern states and Cuba, will open a nine-day School of Missions and Christian Service at Lake Junaluska.

An orientation meeting at 7:00 p.m. followed by the films "Christian Roots in Southeast Asia" and "Alaska—A World to be Won" is the only activity planned for the opening day.

The school will be composed of approximately 250 conference officers of the WSCS and WSG.

The purpose of the school is to train women in the outreach of the Woman's Division of Christian Service around the world, as well as for inspiration and spiritual enrichment.

Mrs. L. L. Jackson of Birmingham, Ala., is chairman of the school. Mrs. A. C. Johnson of Bowling Green, Ky., is dean.

Each day there will be classes, workshops and clinics conducted by outstanding Methodists on such topics as: Mission Field; U.S.A., Paul's Letters to Local Churches, Southeast Asia, Youth in a Responsible Society—A Christian's Concern, Missionary Education and Service.

There will be a panel discussion on the Presentation of Work in Home Fields conducted by Mrs. Charles M. Henderson Wednesday at 7:45 p.m. in the auditorium.

TV

By Floyd Nelson

According to optometrist surveys there are about 6 million people in the U. S. who are color blind. Now I'm wondering what is going to happen when they start adjusting colored TV sets.

In fact, several people looking at the white screen will often disagree about the quality of the picture seen.

Here are three good clues for a good picture: 1. Notice the nose on the actor; it should be well shaded with light and shadow areas. The hair shouldn't register a solid color, and strands out of place should be seen.

2. The background should not be out of focus. Subjects must be clear and distinct, giving a feeling of depth to the screen.

3. If you don't have this, phone GL 6-6581 and the NELSON'S TV SERVICE will be "Johnny-on-the-spot" to make it possible with the latest electronic servicing equipment.
