

Davis Reports Good Results With Red Raspberry Crop

By ROY R. BECK
Soil Conservation Service
Soil Supervisor Joe S. Davis of White Oak has newly planted red raspberries on one strip of his contour strip-cropped field. Joe has been pleasantly surprised to have a crop of berries this year. He estimates they will yield about a quart to the bush. With about 900 bushes, this first crop may pay for the planting. Mr. Davis also put in field drain tile to take care of a wet area in the field south of his house.

Mark Howell of Jonathan Creek has plowed and planted a crop over the field drain tile he installed last spring. Mr. Howell told us he likes the way it drains land so well that he wants to put in some more in another low wet area just as soon as he can get to it.

Soil Conservation Service personnel dug Reed's Canary Grass from Glenn Noland's farm on Fines Creek - for planting on Wayne Singleton's farm pond installation on Burnett Cove in Cruso. The main stream had been diverted around the pond and was cutting a gully where it came down off the hill past the dam. Reed's Canary Grass grows on creek banks where it mats so tight that water seldom cuts it out. It is an ideal stream erosion control plant for fast flowing water.

Soil Conservation District boundary signs were received this week in Waynesville. Chairman Van Wells hopes to get the first one erected on U. S. 19 and 23 at the Haywood-Buncombe County line. Supervisors of Haywood, Buncombe, and Transylvania Soil Conservation Districts are going 50-50 on the purchase and erection of
