Hoover Plan Lag Is Costly To Families In Haywood

Lack of vigorous action, economy-wise, on the part of Congress and the Administration is costing families in Haywood County an estimated $782,000 a year in needless taxes.

The figure is based on the local level of income, on previous tax payments and on a report prepared by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce to show the financial savings that would result from application of the Hoover Commission proposals.

A growing feeling is apparent in the average citizen that he is being deprived of something. He has heard and read of the work of the Hoover Commission, which labored objectively for two years to determine what improvements, if any, could be made in the functioning of Federal bureaus and activities.

Who would have benefited chiefly from these efficiency measures, the people with large incomes or those with modest earnings? The answer is the latter group. More than 75 percent of personal income tax revenues come from people earning under $6,000 a year.

In Haywood County, it is estimated, the tax saving would have come to $80 per family. All told, it would have amounted to $782,000. This is real money that would have been available to local families for actual spending. It would have generated just that much more business for the local stores and that much better living for each family.

Pressure on Congress and the Government is generating from below to take action on the Hoover Commission proposals now.
